SFA Celebrates 60 Years of Growth

This school year marked the 60th anniversary of SFA. It is only fitting that we prepare for the future by looking to the past.

Sixty years ago, the student body consisted of 158 students. When the college opened its doors in 1923, a student had to be 16 years old to enter college and had usually graduated by the time he was 19 or 20. Now the average age of college freshmen is 18, and most students graduate when they are 22 or 23. No tuition was charged in 1923, but there was a student development fee of $12 for athletics, entertainment and student publications.

Sixty years ago, students had a choice of joining either literary clubs or musical sororities. Classes were held in the Austin Building where the library, the physics lab and other classrooms occupied most of the space. The 19 steps in front of the building were called "The Steps of Opportunity."

In 1923, women had to live in approved boarding houses. The dean of women, Miss Ruth May, was strict in her policies. Every young lady had study hours from 7:30 to 10 p.m. Monday through Friday. Male visitors were allowed on Sunday afternoons and on Saturday nights until 10:30 p.m. If the man in question did not attend SFA, he had to have Miss May's approval to visit one of the women students.

The University was founded in 1921 by the 36th Texas Legislature as a state teachers college. The founding president of SFA was Alton William Birdwell, former history instructor and academic dean of Southwest Texas State Teachers College.

A local steering committee presented to the state legislature a brochure of 23 reasons that SFA should be located in Nacogdoches. Nacogdoches, committee members said, was the most accessible city in East Texas. They claimed that the town had an unusually high moral tone and an exceptional cultural environment. According to the committee, the people of the city were church going; no immoral resorts were located in the city; the jail was empty and the city had 22 boarding houses which could care for students at a monthly rate of $20 for room and board.

Committee members said Nacogdoches was the "Cradle of Texas Liberty," its past dear to every Texan and that its present typified Texas progress.

During the Great Depression, SFA was a teachers college with only 499 students. Twelve clubs (non-Greek) served as the college's organizations. Students felt the economic struggles of the depression. In the atmosphere of austerity, simple campus events such as a school dance assumed greater importance.

Parking didn't represent a large problem to the students of the 30s. Because money was in short supply, few people could own the old Fords and Chevys, even though large cars could be bought for under a thousand dollars. The same lack of money forced the senior class of 1933 to go without an annual.

In 1933, the school song was "The Pine Tree Hymn," still read aloud once a year at the Early Bird Breakfast at Homecoming.

By the time of President Birdwell's retirement, World War II had precipitated economic and social changes that would permanently affect East Texas and SFA. The war did bring an end to the decade of depression and took more than 250,000 people from this area for military service and wartime industrial employment elsewhere.

President Paul Lewis Boynton succeeded President Birdwell. Boynton was a native Texan who had been serving as chairman of the psychology department at George Peabody College for Teachers in Tennessee. During the first three years of his administration, he managed to keep the college open, partly by making it a training base for members of the Women's Army Corps.

In 1949, the 51st State Legislature changed the institution's name by deleting "teacher," although teacher education would remain a significant feature of the academic programs.

While SFA was changing its name and the Depression was ending, the students turned once again to the outside world. Popular movies of the time were, "Cabin in the Sky" and "DuBarry Was Not a Lady," starring Red Skelton, Lucille Ball and Gene Kelly. Cartoons and newsreels from the war played before the features at the theatres.

With the end of World War II in 1945, the GI Bill enabled many former military servicemen to attend school, increasing the school's enrollment tremendously. After the war, many industries focused on the natural resources of the area, and paper mills and other forest-related industries began to grow. The oil industry also affected the area.

In 1945, Nacogdoches acquired its first woman law enforcer. At that time Griffith Boulevard and Vista Drive were unpaved; College Street was only two lanes. With the men returning after the war, once again SFA had a football team, and men again began to join the wartime all-women's band.

At that time much of the campus construction was being completed.

Classroom buildings, a library, a fine arts building and more college housing were built.

In 1950, a student center was proposed as a memorial to Macon Alston Gunter who had attended SFA before being called to war. Gunter died in Sicily, and his parents donated $20,000 for his memorial.

A new gym replaced the old Aikman Gymnasium located where the Ferguson Building extension is now being constructed. Shelton Gymnasium was completed in 1950 at a cost of $232,000 and contained 3,000 seats.

books from the Rusk Building into the Paul L. Boynton Library, better known now as the computer science building.

Dr. Ralph Steen, chairman of the History Department at Texas A & M, became SFA's third president in 1958. The Austin, Rusk, Birdwell and Science Buildings were still the four major classroom buildings, but the new Fine Arts Building was under construction. The Units, Mays, Gibbs, Wisely and Ferguson Halls were the only campus housing at that time.

Twenty years ago, Nacogdoches was a "dry" town, and students were not allowed to have alcohol in their dorm rooms. No member of the opposite sex could visit in the dorm rooms, and permission had to be granted in order to live off campus. Movies of the decade could be seen for 25¢ on what is now called "dollar night." "Altonia" was playing, featuring Sophia Loren, Maximilian Schnell, Fredric March and Robert Wagner. Joanne Woodward and Paul Newman starred in "A New Kind Of Love."

In the 1960s, button-down Oxford shirts could be purchased for $2.99 and a half gallon of ice cream for 69 cents. Maxwell House coffee cost only 55 cents and a five-pound bag of flour could be bought for 39 cents.

Only ten years ago, Nacogdoches could claim only two fastfood restaurants. With the influx of students each semester and the steady increases in enrollment, the town grew to meet the need. Today there are over 15 fast-food restaurants along North Street alone. Now it takes longer to cross North Street on foot, and many of the older homes that made Nacogdoches unique have been torn down.

William R. Johnson, a historian and vice president for academic affairs at Texas Tech University, succeeded President Steen. Under Dr. Johnson's administration, the University's enrollment has reached a record total of over 12,000 students, and the school has moved into a new collegiate division. New facilities have been added, including structures for mathematics and nursing; new structures for the Early Childhood Laboratory and the School of Liberal Arts and renovation of structures for the Schools of Fine Arts and Forestry.

Enrollment reached record numbers in both the fall and spring semester of the 1983-84 school year. Now students are charged "activity" fees as well as tuition. Now there are more than two types of organizations from which to choose. There are any number of clubs ranging from music to education, math to foreign language, sports to English.

No classes are held in the Austin Building, and the library has a building of its own. Most students now live either in the dorms or in off-campus apartments. Study hours are up to the individual, not to a supervisor or "dorm mother."

More students own their own cars than in days past, and parking problems have increased with the enrollment. Although the college no longer trains the Women's Army Corps, it does support a military science program.

Last year popular music ranged from "Oh, What A Feeling," to Michael Jackson's "Thriller" album or Yes's "Owner of a Lonely Heart." Popular movies included "Terms of Endearment," "The Big Chill," "Yentyl" and "Scarface."

The football team re-won Chief Caddo when they defeated Northwestern University. The Chief stood in the Student Development Office in the UC for the first time since 1977.

Nacogdoches is no longer a "dry" town and has many clubs on North Street. Button-down Oxford shirts cost approximately $25 and were a fashion "must." Flashdance fashion was also popular, typified by off-the-shoulder sweat shirts. Other fashion trends included mini skirts and walking shorts.

Gasoline prices dropped in December to below a dollar a gallon.

In October, a Korean airliner was shot down by Russians who claimed the airship had invaded Soviet airspace and had been warned before shots were fired. Following the attack, a surge of American patriotism swept the country in reaction to the incident.

A bombing of the senate chamber in the U.S. Capitol led to the construction of permanent concrete barricades at the White House and the State Department.

The Battleship New Jersey, veteran of World War II, the Korean War and the Vietnam War, fired for the first time against positions in Lebanon on December 14.

The Grenada invasion marked the first time since 1917 that an entrenched Communist country had been successfully overthrown.

The year 1983 brought computers into American homes in record numbers and the worst recession in history came to an end. The political races began with former astronaut John Glenn, former vice president Walter Mondale and the Rev. Jesse Jackson seeking the Democratic nomination. President Ronald Reagan announced that he would run for re-election. President Reagan was named as Time's Man of the Year along with Soviet leader Yuri Andropov.

The year marked the beginning of new political clout for minorities. The United States had a woman governor, a female astronaut and a black Miss America.

The television show "The Day After" drew 100 million viewers and stirred up talk over the use of nuclear arms.

The Magna Carta, on its American tour, was exhibited in the UC and drew over 15,000 viewers. The 769-year-old document was kept under tight security and sealed in bullet-proof plastic.

George Orwell's 1984 hit the best seller list in 1983. Orwell did not believe that the book's predictions would actually occur. His idea of electronic surveillance is evident in computers and the use of "spies in the skies." Many countries use the "truth-twisting" methods displayed in the book to win the support of the masses.

Nineteen eighty-three marked the 20th anniversary of the assassination of John F. Kennedy.

At the end of the year, many students had to face graduation and leave behind their carefree student days. Although they face an uncertain world, their memories of SFA will always be with them.

'The Wall' Thrives in Center of Campus,

By Michelle Dewitt

SFA provides students with an education, career opportunities and a place to "hang out." This is a place to meet with friends, swap notes from missed classes and catch up on the latest gossip.

At SFA, this social hangout is called "The Wall." Exactly how and when "The Wall" got its name is not known. The title itself can be misleading. The area included is actually the courtyard surrounded by the McGee Business Building, the Steen Library and the Education Building.

Fraternities and various other groups have informally designated places to meet in the courtyard. Members of different organizations just simply meet there because "that's the place where they've always met."

"The Sigma Chis always meet in front of the McGee Building," Dennis Brown, Huffman junior, said. "It's convenient because most of us have class in this area. 'The Wall' gives us a place to socialize with each other and our little sisters. It's just a tradition for us."

King Sloan, Plano junior and a member of Sigma Tau Gamma Fraternity, said, "It's a place to go and kill the 10 minutes between the classes. Everyone drops by to shoot the bull. It's not really a status symbol or anything."

Many women students admit that they intentionally walk by "The Wall" to see men they are interested in.

One sophomore said, "If I look like I just rolled out of bed, I'll take a round-about way to class to avoid going by there. The guys at 'The Wall' check out the girls like they're pieces of meat."

In response to that statement, her boyfriend said, "It's really the other way around. Susie Sororities strut by to inspect the guys. They're always hanging around their favorite frat, campaigning for Lil Sis."

Anyone who "hangs out" at "The Wall" will notice that the students who congregate there represent a variety of stereotypes. Although many believe you have to belong to a Greek association to feel comfortable there, students of different clubs and teams are also found at "The Wall."

Sometimes, however, a student feels as if he is invading someone else's territory by standing there between classes.

"The other day I happened to be sitting on a bench studying for class. All of a sudden I was surrounded by 20 guys in matching shirts. I felt like a fool," one freshman said.

A few students said they think the idea of "The Wall" is on a high school student's level. They believe the idea of standing by a slab of cement to look important is ridiculous.

"The kids who mill around their cliques acting like they're better than others who don't have a clique are so immature!" one junior said.

Most of the students who do visit their peers on a regular basis believe that those who criticize them are guilty of prejudging people.

"People that act like we're snobs are imagining things," Julie Flora, Plano senior, said. "I stop by to visit the fraternity walls to say hello to friends I haven't seen in a while, not to act like I have status."

Mary Ann Notter, Dallas senior, agreed with this view. "Going by 'The Wall' to see what everybody is up to is fun. It's perfectly normal to want a meeting place established between classes. You can always hear people saying, 'Hey, I'll meet you at 'The Wall' after class!'"

Alabama Performs in Coliseum

By Michelle Dewitt

The three cousins from Fort Payne, Ala., and their longhaired drummer stole the audience's hearts with their outstanding performance on October 1. Fans left with hoarse voices and blistered hands. They screamed and clapped like typical groupies throughout the entire performance.

SFA Coliseum will never be the same. The show opened with Janie Fricke, Female Vocalist of the Year. In her red leather pants, the curvaceous blonde sang favorite "saloon songs" and a few of her hits. Fricke was misty-eyed when she sang "It Ain't Easy Bein' Easy" and "You Don't Know Love."

Her number one hit, "Heartache Lookin' For A Place to Happen," quickly changed Fricke's mood to one of electricity. The men seemed to especially enjoy the song.

After an intermission, the house lights went out and blue-green smoke started coming out of the drum set. For a minute, I thought I was at a KISS concert. A deep voice introduced the "Entertainers of the Year," and I knew it wasn't KISS.

Alabama's opening song, "Love in the First Degree," had the audience screaming for more. And more good stuff is what they got.

Three of the "boys in the band" automatically scored points when they appeared on stage wearing SFA T-shirts. Lead vocalist Randy Owen scored points with his natural good looks.

After singing what has become their favorite theme song, "My Home's in Alabama," they felt obligated to sing a rendition called "Your Home's in Texas." The audience went wild.

Jeff Cook, lead guitarist, played a piece of "Tennessee River" with his teeth on the guitar. Cook also proved himself to be quite talented at harmonizing with his cousins.

The group relied on audience participation to keep the show suspenseful. They made you feel as if you were telling them what you wanted to hear. They even went so far as to swing a spotlight around the near sell-out crowd pep-rally style for yell competition.

The audience was then allowed to sneak-preview "Eighteen Wheeler" and "I'm Not That Way Anymore," two songs released in late January.

The charming Owen dedicated "Close Enough to Perfect" to all the women in the world who don't get enough credit from the men in their lives. He could have won Gloria Steinem's heart with that line.

Owen too frequently played to the sparse audience behind the stage. Although it was a nice gesture to those who waited too late to buy good tickets, those up front could barely hear the beginning of such favorites as "Old Flame."

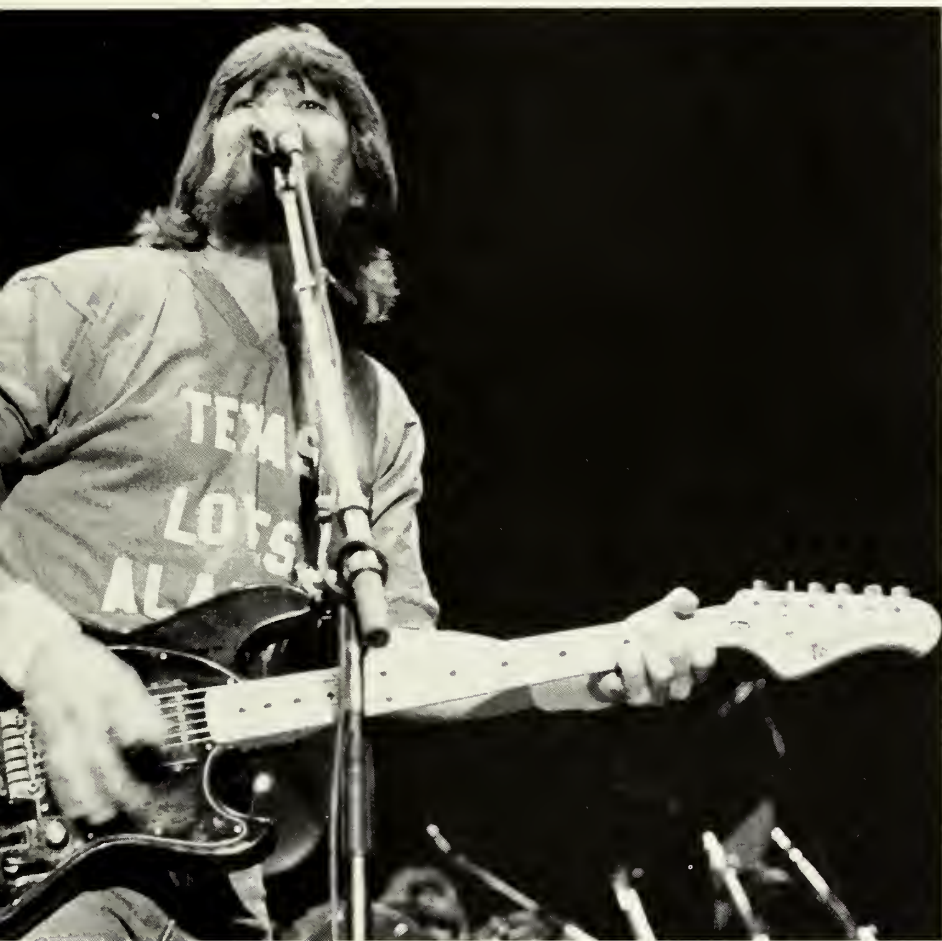

The adoring fans could not get enough of Alabama. The group was brought back repeatedly for encores. The SFA Coliseum was shaking from people stomping their feet and demanding more.

Randy Owen, Jeff Cook and Teddy Gentry—three cousins from Fort Payne, Ala.—have come a long way. Owen and Gentry used to work as carpet layers while Cook had a government job.

"Don't ever think we're too big to need your help," Owen said at a press conference before the concert. "Musicians have something to say. Singing is the way we express ourselves and get a lot of things off our chests."

Sixty Years of Class: Homecoming

SFA celebrated its 55th Homecoming in conjunction with the celebration of the University's 60th anniversary. The theme for Homecoming was Sixty Years of Class.

As part of the Homecoming festivities, the Sylvan's Club in the School of Forestry sponsored Lumberjack Day with events such as crosscut sawing, log-rolling relay, greased pole climbing, bucket brigade and tug of war. Activities for individual competitions also included axe throwing, fire fighting, Lumberjack costume contest, pulpwood toss and tobacco spitting.

The 1983 winners of the distinguished alumni awards were Charles O. Kilpatrick and Glen A. Chancellor. Kilpatrick, a former Pine Log editor who earned a bachelor of arts degree at SFA in 1943, is editor and publisher of the San Antonio Express-News.

Chancellor, a 1959 graduate, earned a bachelor of forestry degree at SFA. He is group vice president, forests division, of Temple-Eastex, Inc.

The Lumberjack Band and Twirl-O-Jacks led the Torchlight and Homecoming parades. The Torchlight Parade, sponsored by the Intrafraternity Council, was one of the participation events in the competition for overall homecoming award.

Before the SFA Lumberjack/Southwest Texas State University football game, the Homecoming Royalty was presented. The 1983 Homecoming Queen Angie Lipsey, Missouri City senior, and Homecoming King Mark Bullock, Nacogdoches senior, entered and exited the field via helicopter.

Three former letter men were inducted into the Lumberjack Athletic Hall of Fame. They are John E. Linney, Harold Fischer and Gene Barbin.

Homecoming festivities were appropriately culminated with a Lumberjack victory and with an alumni dance.

M*A*S*H Portrayed Idiocy of War

Former M*A*S*H star Mike Farrell opened to a standing ovation when he spoke to students Nov. 17 in the Grand Ballroom, UC.

Asked about his M*A*S*H costar, Farrell said, "Alan Alda is everything positive that anyone's ever written about him." Farrell's favorite episode of M*A*S*H shows a reporter interviewing the members of the camp. Farrell calls the episode "the best single half hour that's ever been on the air."

Speaking of B.J. Honeycutt, the character he portrayed in M*A*S*H, Farrell said, "B.J. and I share a lot of the same views." But Farrell added that he was different from Honeycutt in some ways. "B.J. doesn't have as many rough edges as I do," he said.

Throughout his speech, Farrell answered questions from the audience about M*A*S*H and about U.S. military involvement around the world.

Farrell said, "Voter apathy in this country is appalling." He said he is involved in politics because he is a citizen and believes we all, as citizens, are responsible for what our country does. Farrell said, "I was a political and social activist before I became an actor." When asked if he would like to be President, Farrell replied, "I don't want to be in politics except as a citizen."

Farrell said M*A*S*H portrayed the idiocy of the war in Korea.

"We had a lot of support from the military," he said. "They knew that we were talking about the mindlessness of war." Farrell said that the U.S. government's rationale for invading Grenada is contradictory. "... it's one more indication that our President leaps before he looks," he said. "We have absolutely no business dictating to any country what kind of government they should have. How can we condemn the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan if we invade Grenada?"

Falwell Advocates Military Strength

The Rev. Jerry Falwell, leader of the Moral Majority, a conservative political activist group, spoke on the topic, "America on the Rebound," on Sept. 12 in the Grand Ballroom, UC. Audience reaction to his comments was strong. "Amen," "hallelujahs," and applause were mixed with boos and harshly worded questions.

Falwell said four major crises confront the American public: Soviet expansionism, nuclear buildup, possible economic collapse and moral decadence. Citing moral decadence as the basis for all other crises, Falwell summarized the Moral Majority's position as "pro-life, pro-family, pro-morality and pro-defense." He blamed previous generations' "lack of respect for traditional values" and the media for the country's moral decadence. Falwell said the media have "promoted the socialist cause. If the media had been around in Jesus' time, he wouldn't have gotten anything done."

Falwell proclaimed abortion the "national sin of America." "Only the born can speak for the unborn" he said. "Do we have the right to murder 13 million babies who can't speak for themselves? God loves human life."

When Falwell mentioned the pro-life stance, a student in the audience began loudly questioning Falwell's support of Israel. Falwell responded, "these people always scream about the First amendment until it's someone else's turn to talk." Falwell said America should never turn its back on Israel. The student continued to interrupt Falwell's speech and was asked to leave. As she walked out Falwell snapped, "Why don't you carry a swastika with you, honey?"

Speaking of Soviet expansionism and nuclear buildup, Falwell described the Soviets as having one goal—world conquest. "I would rather fight them in El Salvador than in El Paso," he said. Falwell advocated military strength as the greatest deterrent to war. "The Soviets are in an arms race; we're in reverse," he commented.

When a member of the audience suggested that a contradiction exists between pro-life stance and pro-capital punishment, pro-nuclear buildup positions, Falwell acknowledged no contradiction.

Parents' Day Draws Crowd of 2,000

By Joan Plassman

About 2,000 people attended a barbeque at the Ag Pond Oct. 8 as part of RHA's Ninth Annual Parents' Day, an increase of about 200 over last year. An estimated 1,200 people attended the morning reception, and a standing-room-only crowd of about 1,300 saw Tom Sullivan, sponsored by UC Programs, at the Grand Ballroom, UC.

Each residence hall presented a reception for parents. Some performed skits or talent shows. Others conducted tours of the dormitory or featured question and answer periods. Most dorms offered refreshments during the receptions.

During halftime at the football game Saturday night, the RHA recognized three groups of parents.

The family of Don Pieper, Houston sophomore, was recognized for being the largest family group in attendance.

The parents of Allison Morse, Woodville sophomore, received Parents' Day T-shirts for traveling the longest distance; they came from New Hampshire, 1,510 miles away.

The parents of Delaina Falk, Garland junior, received T-shirts for attending the most Parents' Day celebrations. They have attended six, since Delaina had other family members at SFA. Eight members represented their family.

The barbeque, set up by RHA and Food Service, ran smoothly, according to Debbie Owensby, RHA adviser.

"Parents' Day began as a small event for RHA nine years ago," Owensby said. "Now it's a campus-wide event through the help of the administration, departments and organizations."

"Parents' Day was fantastic," said Shari Dooley, Desoto junior. "It was well organized by committee chairman Kim Karnes. We had a good time, and I think the parents did, too. In fact, they told us so afterward."

Ms. SFA—Sharon Seitzinger

Ms. SFA, Sharon Seitzinger, is a food systems management major from Dallas. Her overall GPA is 3.3.

Seitzinger would like to combine her knowledge of nutrition and her interest in physical fitness in her career choice. She wants to be a jazzercise instructor and a certified graphoanalyst within the next three years.

She has served as president and historian for the Nutrition and Food Systems Club. She also created this organization's first scrapbook and organized many of the group's activities.

She is also a member of the Home Economics Club and the Texas

Student Dietetics Association.

Seitzinger performed choreographed exercise routines in the weekly segment "Shape Up With Sharon" seen on SFA TV 2.

She is a member of Zeta Tau Alpha for which she was recording secretary, scholarship chairman, alumni newsletter chairman and Greek Week talent show chairman and performer. She was active in all chapter activities including rush, alumni teas, sisterhoods, service projects and initiation.

She served as secretary, historian and fund raiser chairman for Lambda Chi Alpha Little Sisters.

At the Catholic University Center, Seitzinger served as eucharistic minis-

UC Programs Coordinates Entertainment

By Lisa Reeves

UC Programs is an association of students given the task of providing a varied schedule of entertaining, cultural, educational and recreational extracurricular activities for the entire university community.

UC Programs consists of eight committees, each producing activities that arise from the creativity and work of the members. Hundreds of SFA student volunteers work on these committees, and, with the assistance of five professional staff members and the Dean of Student Development, profile activities that range from major concerts to Frisbee tournaments.

Involvement with one of the committees can give hands-on experience in decision-making, group processes, communication, motivation, team-building, financing, conflict resolution, planning, evaluation, and leadership. By participating in these experiences, students can actually put classroom concepts to work. More importantly, students are given as much responsibility as they can handle. This prepares students to take their places in society after their college careers, which is what Student Development is all about.

The eight committees of UC Programs are Cinema Arts, Fashion, Hospitality, Ideas and Issues, Outdoor Recreation, Performing Arts, Special Events and Travel.

The Cinema Arts Committee selects, promotes and produces film programs, including the popular weekend series for the SFA community. Members assist at the movies by taking tickets and working concessions. Some of this year's movies included "An Officer and a Gentleman," "Arthur," "Risky Business," and "Trading Places."

The social conscience of SFA, the Fashion Committee, works hard to keep the SFA community informed on the latest trends in fashion. In September, official UC Programs models, called Mamselles, along with male models, called Esquires, are selected during campus-wide try-outs. The Fashion Committee produced fashion shows such as "The Ho-Ho Fashion Show" and "The Bridal Fair."

The Hospitality Committee is the hospitable group at SFA. This committee serves as the official host of UC Programs and produces programs such as pictures with Santa, children's Valentine party and Easter egg hunts. This committee also works closely with the SFA A Cappella Choir to produce one of the University's most popular events—the annual Madrigal Dinner.

The Ideas and Issues Committee brings qualified speakers to the SFA campus to inform, educate or simply present an unusual point of view. This committee strives to coordinate their activities with academic departments on campus to enhance existing educational programs or to simply raise new questions. Mike Farrell, James Watt and Tom Sullivan were a few of this year's speakers.

The Outdoor Recreation Committee plans outdoor activities such as raft trips, camping trips, rappelling and hackey sac tournaments. This committee is also in charge of renting camping equipment.

The Performing Arts Committee brings them all—Hall and Oates, Alabama, Cheap Trick and .38 Special. Since SFA is the major concert place in East Texas, the Performing Arts Committee is the producer of SFA's major concerts. This committee has jobs in ticket validating, catering, working stage crew and providing security.

Producing a diverse schedule of activities is the task of the Special Events Committee. Newly formed during the Spring of 1983, this group produces all programs that are beyond the scope of the other committees. The Gong Show and a Variety Show were just a few of this year's diverse events.

The Travel Committee is ready when you are. This group plans low cost trips for students such as Steamboat Springs in the winter and Acapulco in the spring. Other trips included bus trips to football games, the Renaissance Festival trip and a Six Flags trip.

UC Programs is governed by the UC Programs Board which consists of four executive officers—the president, vice president, operations manager, the public information officer and the eight committee chairmen. These students are selected during March and April. On the 1983-84 Program Board were Gigi Underhill, president; Jill Jackson, vice president; Robert Six, operations manager; Lisa Reeves, public information officer; Sari Brown, cinema arts; Stacie Meggenberg, Julie Biggers, fashion; Tammy McCurdy, hospitality; Marianne Cross, ideas and issues; Dan Parnell, Brian Howell, outdoor recreation; Tammy Broz, performing arts; Terri Crump, special events and Pam Wilhelm, travel. UC Programs staff includes Marlin Bryant, coordinator; Steve Westbrook, adviser; Mike Lanagan, graphics shop manager; Billie Elliot, arts and crafts center; Robin Johnson, secretary and Barrow Floyd, box office manager.

Squad Established to Enhance Spirit

By Michelle DeWitt

"Nobody knew what to expect when word got out that there was going to be a pom pon squad at SFA," Bette Neal, director of the squad, said. "I think the students, parents and community were really pleased with the professional performance."

The group of women made their debut Feb. 9 at the SFA-Sam Houston basketball game. The squad had been practicing since early January and were determined to prove they were serious about the organization.

According to Neal, about 60 women tried out for the squad Dec. 1.

Twelve members were chosen, along with two alternates.

"The pom pon squad was created to enhance spirit," Neal said. "A group of students thought up the idea and worked to get funding for it. I thought it was kind of neat that they followed through with their idea and didn't give up on it."

The pom pon squad will work during pre-game and halftime activities at Lumberjack and Ladyjack basketball games.

"I feel the girls have grown really close because they have a common goal," Neal said. "They always give 100 percent, and their hard work is reflected in their routines."

Shuttle Bus Drivers Serve Commuters

By Tanya Cunningham

Most students complain about having to park in the J parking lot. But three special people, Carrie Lathan, Carlton King and John D. Moore, make that situation a lot easier.

Lathan, King and Moore are the J parking lot bus drivers. Every day they get commuters to their classes on time and return them to their cars.

Lathan drove a bus for the Nacogdoches Independent School District for seven years before coming to SFA. She has been here a year and a half.

"It's a big change from the school district. I've never done anything but drive a school bus. It's enjoyment. You get to meet a lot of people," she said.

Lathan said she feels that the students appreciate what she does for them.

"I love them all, and I've never had problems with any of them," she said.

One SFA student, Patricia Coffman remembers when she was accidentally injured in the J parking lot. One of the bus drivers took her to the health clinic and waited to see if she was injured.

"I think they're great (the bus drivers) all of them," Coffman said.

Another way the drivers help students is by letting them off in front of the computer science building instead of the gazebo when they're in a hurry.

Of course, they can't do this if the bus is full or if people are standing in the aisle.

Lathan said, "It saves them a little time getting off at their class, and I don't mind."

King was also formerly employed by the Nacogdoches Independent School District. He worked there for eight years as a bus driver before coming to SFA four years ago.

He said he loves the SFA students, and that they like him too.

"They call me 'Stomper,' and they give me Christmas presents and Valentines. They're always nice and friendly, and they laugh a lot."

Although King loves the students, he said that driving a bus gets monotonous. "You drive up and down, up and down for eight hours."

However, King's driving is rewarded by the students' responses.

Eric Fisketjon, Forrest City, Ark. junior, said, "I think they do a fine job."

Moore came to SFA four years ago because he needed a job.

He said the students are what make driving a bus fun. "I get along fine with the students. You have to be friendly in order for them to be friendly."

Moore doesn't consider driving a bus to be monotonous. He said, "It's just a day's work—somebody's got to do it."

Moore said he makes anywhere from 50 to 75 runs a day from the parking lot to campus and back.

"SFA has all the parking they can afford at this time. They could hire more bus drivers, but the area's not big enough to call for more."

Leslie Jones, Dallas junior, said, "I think the bus drivers do a great job with what they have."

Dr. Francine Hoffman: 'This Is the Way It Is, People.'

by Michele Bennett

Dr. Francine Hoffman, SFA's first full-time journalism teacher, retired this year after teaching here 17 years. She began her teaching career by teaching all seven grades in a one-teacher school in Kaufman County. She taught in a high school, at Henderson Junior College and at East Texas State University before she joined the SFA faculty in 1966. She worked part time as a reporter on a newspaper in Athens while teaching at Henderson Junior College.

Dr. Hoffman earned her bachelor's degree from the University of Texas and her doctorate from East Texas State University.

We remember when she said:

A person is not deceased; he does not pass away; he just dies.

People don't reach their twilight years. They get old.

Learn to write correct . . . ly.

Reporters, develop a nose for news.

I enjoy teaching, or I would not have taught.

. . . students have not changed. Students of today are as they were yesterday. Some are eager to learn, and some have to be pushed.

I do not care what _____ says. The fact is . . .

We said this about her:

She was very conscientious and devoted to her work.

She's tough for a reason, and the reason isn't obvious at the time, but it becomes obvious not long after graduation.

Watt Addresses Land Management Fight

By Belinda Plazinich

The primary struggle over land management in the United States is between the elite preservationists in Washington, D.C., and the people within the states who want progress, former Secretary of the Interior James Watt said.

Addressing a capacity crowd, Watt said the nation's public land is used for wildlife refuges, recreation, mining and timber. To continue services for the benefit of the people, proper management is needed, he said.

"These lands are your lands. They belong to all of the people."

If the government manages the land properly, there will be enough natural resources to sustain the United States for thousands of years, the former secretary said.

The United States, however, imports 40 percent of its crude materials from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries and Arab nations, according to Watt.

"The real struggle is over the form of government we have in America.

That's why we have this rebellious attitude (toward the government)."

From natural resources Watt went to Reaganomics. He said both he and President Reagan knew if changes were made within the Department of the Interior, there would be a stir in Washington, D.C.

"We had 15 months to improve the government regulation of land," Watt said.

He questioned the integrity of Congress when the funds for acquiring national parklands were cut by 50 percent. Watt also questioned the press for reporting only the problems that arose during his term as Secretary of the Interior.

"In 1982, we did more than twice what the Carter administration did in four years. Our commitment was to the people. Did we get support? Where was the press? Integrity? Integrity? Where is it?"

During the question and answer session, Watt said the only two people capable of political leadership in the United States are Ronald Reagan and the Rev. Jesse Jackson. He said Jackson is not the best man for the office of the presidency, but is a good leader.

Watt contradicted himself when he was asked why the Beach Boys had not been allowed to play in Washington D.C. He said since a group involved with the problems of drug abuse had asked that a patriotic singer play, Wayne Newton was chosen for the job instead of the Beach Boys.

When asked questions about public land, Watt said it is up to the people to decide if they want a highly centralized government making the decisions of what to do with the land, or if they want to have access for their own use.

He implied the only way the people will be able to obtain full use of public land will be to get someone like himself in the office of the Secretary of the Interior.

"I was committed to a new beginning and I wanted to leave tracks. I made a difference," Watt said.

Computer Science Enrollment Triples

With the increasing use of computers in all aspects of the business world, the quality of SFA's computer science program assumes great importance.

"We're just fortunate to have all the ingredients that make a good program," Dr. Craig A. Wood, chairman of the computer science department, said.

Dr. Wood said SFA computer science graduates have the backgrounds that most companies are looking for for several reasons.

First, Wood praised the degree program required by the University. "You must have a well-rounded program that supports you," he said. He also mentioned good students and faculty as major reasons for the pro-ory."

Finally, he said that a mixture of computer science and business is an advantage. "It's an advantage to our pragmatic program that the students (computer science majors) are required to do what's required in the degree plan for the School of Business," Dr. Wood said.

He said that companies like the SFA computer science graduates and many company recruiters return to SFA. "Last year a major energy company cut its recruiting at other schools by half, but recruiting wasn't reduced at SFA. They (recruiters) said it was because of the quality of the students coming out of our programs," Dr. Wood said.

SFA has many students who chose enough hours to accommodate the students. "The students' needs are growing at such a fast pace that there is no way the University can keep up with the growth," Dr. Wood said.

With the rapid increase in the number of students requiring computer science equipment, the fact that the state does not allocate money for equipment (as opposed to allocations for computer science instruction) is a concern. Equipment for the computer science program must be bought through university operations and maintenance funds.

According to Dr. Wood, some students know more about microcomputers than some instructors. "Some students know more about microcomputers, Apples, IBMs and Radio Shack home computers. I sometimes go to them to find out things about microcomputers," he said.

Because of the widespread use of computers in many high schools, Dr. Wood believes the freshmen entering the computer science program in the next four or five years will have vast experience.

"As few as five years ago in an incoming introductory class, less than 20 percent of the class had experience with computers. Now 50 percent of the class has had experience with computers. Computer literacy is very important now, and that's why our program is continuing to grow," Dr. Wood concluded.

"We have a pragmatic program; a combination of background theory and actual program writing in the courses," Dr. Wood said.

gram's success. "I think SFA gets good students," he said.

Another plus that SFA offers its students is a good curriculum. "We have a pragmatic program; a combination of background theory and actual program writing in the courses," Dr. Wood said. The problem with a lot of schools, he said, is that they have extremes. Dr. Wood explained, "one extreme is a curriculum that talks about how to do it, but you never do it. The other is the trade-school type curriculum where students write programs but never talk about the-the computer science field as a career. Fall enrollment of 2,100 students almost tripled the 825 students that enrolled in the 1975 fall semester. Dr. Wood predicts enrollment will probably double by the fall of '84. He said that growth can be largely attributed to increasing interest in computers. "With the rising interest in computers, our program is continuing to grow. The computer is like the automobile. It has become a part of us," Dr. Wood said.

The computer center is open 24 hours a day and there still are not

Man Donates $10,000 in Father's Memory

By Kevin McKinney

"I wanted to give the money in his (Charles Lowery's) memory. He was a fine fellow," Mr. O. L. Lowery said. The 82-year-old Lowery donated $10,000 to the SFA Alumni Association to create a criminal justice scholarship in his father's name.

Charles Lowery worked as SFA's first security guard from 1924 to 1949. "President Birdwell hired him," Lowery said.

The Lowery family resided originally in Smyrna, Texas, where they owned a ranch. "Down in Smyrna we owned three or four hundred acres of land, but it wasn't necessary to own land because it was open range,"

Mr. Lowery recalled. "We raised what we called razorback hogs . . . they fed on acorns."

In 1924, the family moved to Nacogdoches. "My daddy moved my mother so the kids could go to school," he said. In 1924 Lowery and his three brothers attended SFA, then a teachers college. He and two of the brothers graduated with teacher's certificates.

Mr. Lowery's mother ran a boarding house on Starr Avenue. "At that time they didn't have any dorms. My mother was rooming girls. She had twenty or thirty girls staying there."

After graduating from SFA, Mr. Lowery ran a vending machine business for almost 15 years. "I sold cigarette machines and pictrolas," he said. Later Mr. Lowery entered the ranching business and ran cattle on 200 acres of land in Shady Grove, Texas.

Mr. Lowery returned to Nacogdoches in 1944, and in 1948 he built a house on Blount Street where he lives today.

The scholarship was awarded to Dusty Calhoun, Lufkin freshman. "The scholarship is for students who want to study law and want to be police officers," Lowery said.

MAGNA

magna carta in nacogdoches

magna carta in nacogdoches

1215 origin of liberties

By Joan Steele

King John, brother and successor to Richard the Lion-Hearted, began his harsh, tyrannical reign of England in 1199. By 1215, the feudal barons could no longer tolerate the King's unfairness to the church, to themselves and to others. So, on June 15, the barons united and met King John at Runnymede, a remote meadow on the Thames River near Windsor.

The barons wrote a document which reduced the king's powers. Under pressure from the nobles, the king signed the document.

What remains is the Magna Carta — a document which sets the precedent for modern laws and free constitutions throughout the world. In the Magna Carta, the barons committed to writing a widely held body of common law. So, even when the document was drawn up, little was included which was actually new. King John became a subject of the law and could deprive no one of life, liberty or property without due process.

Twenty copies of the Magna Carta, called exemplars, were made, circulated to various kindgoms and read to the public by town criers.

Only four exemplars of the great

Magna Carta remain. They are at Lincolnshire, Salisbury and the British Museum. SFA, in coordination with the Nacogdoches Chapter of the National Society of Daughters of the American Revolution, proudly hosted the display of the Lincoln Exemplar on Jan. 22-25, in the Regent's Suite, UC.

The Lincoln Exemplar arrived in Lincolnshire in 1215 and was entrusted to the bishop of Lincoln. Since then, it has remained the property of Lincoln Cathedral.

Lincolnshire is a large cathedral city of considerable importance. Lincoln Cathedral is a gothic masterpiece. William the Conqueror authorized the original structure in 1072, but an earthquake in 1186 did extensive damage to it. Rebuilding began in 1192 and was completed in 1280.

According to a speaker at the SFA exhibition, during the hustle and bustle of construction at the cathedral, the document was folded, placed in a book and left untouched until the late 1800s. This careless act probably prolonged the life of the document since no light faded the ink.

The document itself is neither dramatic nor glamorous. It is a working document, with no margins and with tiny print. Written on an 18-square-inch piece of vellum, the Magna Carta has none of the intricate, ornate artwork for which old documents are noted. It is written in "court" Latin with home-made ink. It is almost unimpressive when compared to the legend and protection which surrounds it.

The Lincoln Exemplar is vacuum-sealed between two pieces of glass. This glass envelope is displayed under a protective covering which is bomb and bullet proof. Should the display case be disturbed, the document would fall safely into a lower compartment. It is placed in a bank vault at night and is transported by Purolator Armored.

The Lincoln Exemplar of the Magna Carta made its first United States Tour in 1939 for the World's Fair in New York. World War II began shortly afterwards, and the exemplar was housed in Fort Knox until peace and safety prevailed. The Magna Carta was exhibited in California in 1976 for the bicentennial celebration. Our United States Constitution is heavily influenced by the Magna Carta.

According to Mrs. Branch Patton, regent of the local DAR chapter, the Lincoln Exemplar will make its way to San Francisco next. Members of the Nacogdoches community raised about $9,000 to finance the exhibit.

Magna Carta

In Magna Carta King John acknowledged in writing the ancient principles of English law. In form the Charter was a grant of privileges, freely given by the king. In reality it was a treaty forcibly extorted from him by the nobles. Its main purpose was to reaffirm the feudal rights of the barons, but it offered protection to other groups as well — freemen, townsmen, the church. Every one of its brief sentences is full of future law, and some have found their way into free constitutions everywhere.

On the whole, the Charter contained little that was absolutely new. John had been breaking the customary law, so the law had to be defined and set in writing. Subsequently in age after age, a confirmation of the Charter would be demanded and granted as a remedy for oppression. Its fundamental principle was that the King was subject to the law, and that no authority, however high, should have the right to deprive anyone of life, liberty, or property without due process of law.

The Constitution of the United States is itself a child of Magna Carta.

The Lumberjack Band

The Lumberjack Band at SFA was organized in 1926 when fifteen musicians came together under the direction of J.T. Cox. At that time, the band's home was under the pines, for the band had to borrow space to rehearse. Not until 1932 was a hall built to house the band. The Lumberjack Band wore its first uniforms in 1928. The uniform consisted of capes, white trousers and regular military caps. By the time of the Depression, the band had grown to 72 members.

In 1968, Mel Montgomery, veteran of 20 years of successful teaching in the public schools of Texas, assumed the directorship of the Lumberjack Band. The 1973 season saw the addition of the Flag Corps, adding to the color of the marching band. In 1977, the Lumberjack Band acquired their purple and white uniforms. A rifle team was added in 1982. In 1982, Dan Spalding assumed the directorship of the Lumberjack Marching Band with Mel Montgomery remaining as Director of Bands at SFA. Under Spalding's leadership, the 200-member band has continued to thrill audiences with its big sound and precision performances.

Residence Hall 14, known as "The Zoo" for the last six years, was cited as the third most radical dorm in the nation in an article done by Cosmopolitan in the late 1970s. Though they tried to keep that reputation, their main goal was to help students interact with their fellow students through activities and service projects. Such projects included the annual Zoo Hot Dog cookout, Zoo Blow Out, Zoo Formal, Secret Pals with Kerr Dorm, bicycle race and Zoo blood drive.

South Hall

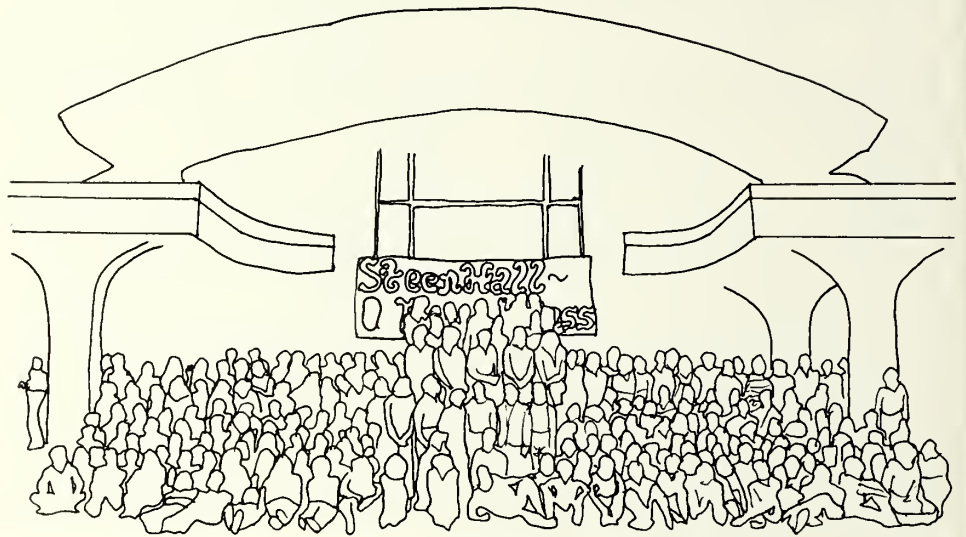

The residents of South Hall

South Hall got students involved in learning and living and had fun at the same time. The hall had an ice breaker within the dorm as a get-acquainted party. They had secret pals with their brother dorm (Hall 13), and they also provided Parents' Day entertainment and refreshments. They sold Halloween treats as a fund raiser. They gave a Christmas party for the convalescent home and participated in intramurals.

Gladys E. Steen Hall won Hall of the Year two years in a row—in the 1981-82 and the 1982-83 school years. In September, a very successful street dance was held in front of Steen Hall. Nine Steen residents were sent to the Southwest Association of College and University Resident Halls Conference at East Texas State University. The Hall also set aside special days to appreciate roommates, suitemates and the maids. October 10-13 was career week at Steen Hall. Six different career persons spoke to the hall. The counseling center also spoke to the hall about career testing. On Parents' Day, a reception was held for moms and dads. The Hall planned a book drive for the Fall Semester with the East Texas Blood Center. For Thanksgiving the residents donated canned and non-perishable food for the needy.

A Special Toast . . .

Despite the fierce competition during Rush, the six sororities and the nine fraternities at SFA have a common bond that keeps the Greek system going strong.

The Greek system is certainly not for everyone. Those who play active roles in fraternities and sororities are the ones who get the most out of it.

Each fraternity and sorority has a mixture of individuals who strive to achieve great things together.

Each organization is the best in the eyes of its members.

Panhellenic Council

Panhellenic Council was established in the 1930s. It was then known as the Inner-Social Club until later in the 1960s when the club became nationalized.

The group of girls is selected from each of the six social sororities to serve as a governing body over the sororities.

The major function of the group is to coordinate the week of rush. Panhellenic decides on the rules for rush, as well as how to enforce them. Some of the prerequisites for rush were 12 completed college hours and 2.0 grade point average.

Panhellenic was involved with service projects within the community as well as on campus. The girls provided food baskets for the needy and visited nursing homes around the community.

Interfraternity Council

"The main purpose for having an Interfraternity Council on a campus is to give fraternities advice and to stress scholastic and extracurricular activity," Tim Wier, president, said.

The Interfraternity Council is the governing body of the men's Greek social organizations. IFC is composed of three representatives from each fraternity on campus. An important objective of the IFC was to cooperate with the University officials and the community.

"The representatives from each fraternity provide us with the public relations input necessary to make the system work," Wier said.

The IFC coordinated annual projects such as Greek Week and Rush.

"One of my goals as president was to improve rush policies," Wier said. "I suggested a 'dry' rush party for one night. Fraternities are recognized as clubs these days instead of brotherhoods."

Wier feels that SFA has the best

IFC in the state of Texas. He came to this opinion while attending an IFC convention at Lamar University in September.

"We have so many leaders in IFC. I know that these guys will move on to major offices in their fraternities."

Brent Wilshire was vice president of IFC. Mark Early was secretary and Wade Jones acted as treasurer.

Dr. William Porter, dean of student development, sponsored the council.

Order of Omega

The Order of Omega, a national honorary fraternity, was established at SFA this year.

The fraternity's main purpose is to recognize those men and women in Greek organizations who have attained a high standard of leadership in interfraternity activities and to inspire others to strive for similar achievement.

The Order of Omega is made up of no more than three percent of the Greek population. Twenty-eight members were chosen.

The charter members are Julia Baker, Denton junior of Delta Delta Delta; Robert Brock, League City junior of Kappa Alpha; Ross Crowe, Houston senior of Delta Sigma Phi; Carrie Crowner, Plano senior of Delta Delta Delta; and Michele DeWitt, Dallas junior of Delta Zeta.

Also Carol Fougerat, Houston junior of Sigma Kappa; Ed Ferguson, Dallas senior of Alpha Tau Omega; Lisa Focht, Dallas junior of Delta Delta Delta; Lisa French, Houston senior of Zeta Tau Alpha; and Fran Gage, Houston junior of Alpha Chi Omega.

Also Karen Gromena, Spring junior of Sigma Kappa; Jenny Hughes,

Alpha Chi Omega

"Alpha Chi Omega offers friendship that you can treasure a lifetime," Lilly Portilla said.

Alpha Chi Omega, founded October 15, 1885, has been at SFA since 1967. Alpha Chis were founded to promote sisterhood, character development among its members and scholarship.

Alpha Chis were involved in many campus activities including cheerleading, SGA, Order of Omega and intramurals. They were also active with Derby Week and Greek Week. Two AXOs were represented on the Homecoming Court this year; Beth Grosz, Senior Princess and Sandi DeHaan, Junior Duchess.

"Alpha Chi has offered me fellowship, friendship and many learning experiences," Cindy Spitzack said.

Alpha Chis held their second annual golf tournament at Woodland Hills Golf Course in October. The tournament was sponsored by Stroh's Beer and the girls donated $500 to Cystic Fibrosis. As another philanthropic activity, the girls sang at the Nacogdoches Convalescent Center during Christmas.

"AXO opened a door that enabled me to meet the special friends that I know will last a lifetime," Susan Dantin said.

Alpha Tau Omega

Nationally, Alpha Tau Omega was founded on September 11, 1885, by three Civil War cadets. A primary goal of the fraternity was that it would seek peace and brotherhood for all mankind, and Alpha Tau Omega would strive to achieve these goals.

Locally, the Eta Iota Chapter attempted to combine the national principles with a wide range of academic, social, community service and athletic functions. In its twelve years of existence, Eta Iota has continued to be a leader in the classroom as well as in the other areas of fraternity involvement. Several chapter academic awards, philanthropy projects, intramural contention and a well-rounded social calendar have been an indication of the group's success.

Some of ATO's chapter activities include Parents' Weekend, annual formal, Viking Feast and ATO-Pull for the Heart Fund.

Chi Omega

On November 12, 1983, the Chi Omegas celebrated their 20th year on campus. Chi Omega was founded nationally in 1895. Cardinal and straw are the colors of Chi Omega, with the white carnation being their flower.

Chi-Os are very active with campus activities including SGA, cheerleaders, Mamselles, as well as major-related organizations.

Though the Chi Omegas do not have a specific philanthropy, the girls stay busy with the community's needs. Such activities as Christmas caroling and participating in the blood drives are just a couple of examples of the diligent work performed by the Chi-Os.

"Chi Omega has helped give my life direction," Lynn Fulmer, president said. "Through the experiences of being in a sorority, I've learned the true meaning of friendship."

Delta Delta Delta

"Delta Delta Delta is based on Christian ideals," Laurie Cureton, president, said. "We feel that it's important to stress scholarship and academics in our sorority. We can still have fun and keep our priorities straight. That's important in college."

Delta Delta Delta was founded at SFA in 1972. Its purpose is to establish a bond of friendship among its members and help them develop a stronger character.

The sorority's colors are silver, gold and blue. Members participate in fall and spring formals, rush parties, teas for faculty, Parents' Weekend and philanthropy projects. Its two philanthropies are scholarships for collegiate women and children's cancer.

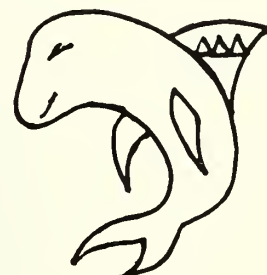

"Although there are a lot of social activities, it's great when a sorority can take the time to help others out," Cureton said.

Delta Delta Delta was founded nationally in 1888. Today, the organization is one of the top three national sororities.

Members are active in Sigma Chi Derby Week, Greek Week, intramurals, fraternity little sisters organizations and honorary fraternities. They placed first in talent during Derby Week.

"I pledged Tri-Delt for a lot of reasons," Nancy Howell said. "I knew during Rush that I could grow close to these girls. They are the type that will stick by you in the bad times as well as the good. I'm proud to be associated with them."

Delta Sigma Phi

Delta Sigma Phi, founded nationally in 1927, organized at SFA in 1960. Green and white represent Delta Sig's colors and the fraternity flower is the carnation.

One of Delta Sig's biggest fund raisers is the annual Playboy Bunny Night. This year over $2,500 was donated to the Nacogdoches Treatment Center. Other campus activities included the blood drive and intramurals as well as having a member on the Homecoming Court.

Many honors were bestowed upon the Delta Sigs this past year. The chapter was recognized nationally as the most improved chapter. Ross Crowe was awarded the Most Outstanding Active Citation of Merit.

The Delta Sigs held their formal at The Dude Ranch in Bandera. Pam Wiggins was named Fraternity Sweetheart at the fraternity's formal.

Delta Zeta

"If I had to describe Delta Zeta in one word, I would say sisterhood," Shawn Swanson, president, said.

Members represent the sorority through their involvement with Student Government, Mamselles, SFA sports, newspaper staff and fraternity little sister organizations. They won first place in Sigma Chi Derby Week and several awards at the Delta Zeta convention.

"Delta Zeta doesn't try and mold you to be something you're not," Reecy Payne said. "It's amazing to see how much we can accomplish by working as a team."

Delta Zeta's colors are pink and green. Their flower is the Killarney Rose.

"It's sad to think I'll be leaving soon," Swanson said. "Being a part of Delta Zeta has made these four years fantastic. I know I'm leaving SFA with lifetime friends."

Kappa Alphas show off new pledges

Kappa Alpha Order

"Kappa Alpha Order is based on principles fostered in the tradition of the 'Old South,'" Kelly McNeely, president, said. "These principles include Christian living and gentlemanly conduct."

Kappa Alpha Order is presently represented on more than 100 college campuses throughout the United States. The SFA chapter was founded in 1968 and dedicated to the ideals of true southern courtesy and bravery.

KA sponsored the annual KA Fight Night for the 16th year. They donated money they earned from admission to the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

The fraternity's colors are crimson rose and magnolia blossom.

Members attended their traditional Old South Ball in the spring.

KAs were actively involved in campus organizations such as Student Government, intramurals, sorority big brother organizations, honorary fraternities and various community projects.

"KAs are not just out for a good time in college," Gary McMillan said. "Our fraternity has a lot of high goals of excellence and scholarship. We try and support each other when one of us needs a friend. KA can offer that to me."

Lambda Chi Alpha

The Lambda Chi Alpha Fraternity was established on this campus on April 27, 1974, with the intent of promoting brotherhood and friendship. The fraternity cultivated this brotherhood through the varied activities in which they participated.

One of Lambda Chi's annual fund raisers was the sorority president kidnapping. The donations were then sent to the Sharing Post.

The Lambda Chis were also active on the campus scene. The men participated in intramurals, SGA and Greek Week.

This spring the Lambda Chis held their annual toga party. "The fact that this party is an annual event helps promote effective public relations within the student sector," Art Miller, social chairman, said.

Phi Delta Theta

Phi Delta Theta is one of the three largest social fraternities in the nation. It was founded at SFA in 1962.

"With our increased participation in school activities and the hard work of all the brothers," Tommy Jones, president, said, "the Phi Delta Theta fraternity is truly representative of the word brotherhood."

The fraternity's activities this semester included a Homecoming float contest, a formal dance, intramural games and an annual spaghetti dinner.

The main goal of the Phi Deltas is to strengthen their brotherhood internally and on campus.

Phi Delt colors are azure and argent. Their flower is the white carnation.

A community service project was held each semester to raise money for a local charity.

The fraternity's philanthropy is the Nacogdoches Community Action Agency.

"We consider ourselves one of the best fraternities on this campus because of our quality membership and our heritage which we can be proud of," Jones said.

"Our fraternity has excelled in many areas of campus life because of our closeknit social structure," Tim Wier, president, said. "Sports is no exception."

Since 1973, the Pikes have consistently remained over-all intramural champions.

The chapter was selected as the best Pi Kappa Alpha chapter in the Texas-New Mexico region.

The fraternity's colors are garnet and gold. Their flower is the Lily of the Valley.

"The Pikes are a great group of guys who work together for common goals and interests," Wier said. "We don't limit ourselves to just being members of a fraternity. We try to represent Pi Kappa Alpha by getting involved in all facets of student life."

Sigma Chi

"Sigma Chi is not just an organization to its members," Ward Carter, president, said. "It's a bond of brotherhood that will last during and after college."

Sigma Chi fraternity was founded at SFA in 1975. Its colors are blue and old gold.

It is the largest and wealthiest international fraternity and second in over all membership.

The Eta Tau chapter collected money during their annual Derby Week and presented a $1,500 check to the Wallace Village for children.

"We have great formals and parties like all the Greek organizations," Ken Hoerster said. "We also try to accomplish a lot of things on campus and in the community."

The fraternity received two national awards—the Legion of Honor Scholarship Award and the Peterson Significant Chapter Award.

The Sigma Chi fraternity Sweetheart for 1982-83, Denee' Lau, won second place in national competition in New Orleans.

The 1983-84 Sweetheart is Shelia Brown.

"The main reason I pledged Sigma Chi is the closeness I recognized during Rush," Greg Richards said. "These guys really help each other out."

Sigma Kappa

"Sigma Kappa is working to strengthen panhellenic relations and grow into a wonderful sisterhood," Mary Abbott, president, said.

Sigma Kappa members strive to become individualistic, hardworking, dedicated women who pull together for one cause—sisterhood.

Sigma Kappa was the first national sorority to organize at SFA. Its flower is the violet and its jewel is the pearl. The members have a motto which says "one heart, one way."

The women participated in several philanthropy projects to help gerontology research, the Women's Shelter, the Maine Sea Coast Mission and the American Farm School in Greece.

They have also become involved in many campus organizations.

Members won second place in Sigma Chi Derby Week, first place in the Delta Zeta UNICEF fundraiser and first place in the Tau Kappa Epsilon Bowling Tournament.

"The Greek system at SFA has so much to offer students," Abbott said. "Sigma Kappa attempts to unify women who are seeking friendship and good times.

"It's so important to realize that the special bond of sisterhood is one of the more special things women will remember after they graduate. They never stop being Sigma Kappas."

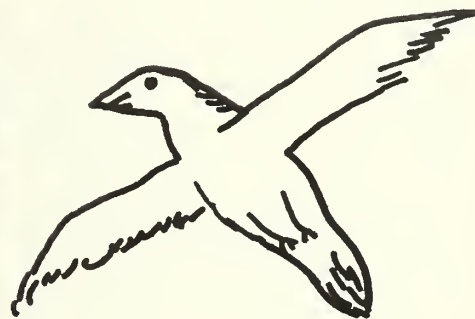

Sigma Kappa was founded on this idea at Colby College in Maine in 1874.

Sigma Tau Gamma

"Our fraternity believes that men are social creatures and that friendships of college men are lasting ones," King Sloan, president, said.

Sigma Tau Gamma seeks to promote these associations through a social fraternity which will uphold the true standards of brotherhood.

"We believe in the principles of value, learning, leadership, excellence, benefit and integrity," Sloan said. "These principles help us establish a conducive atmosphere to promote brotherhood in our chapter."

Sigma Tau Gamma was founded at SFA in 1970 with these principles in mind.

Sigma Tau Gamma is the only "AAA" chapter in Texas. This is the highest chapter rating possible.

Members participated in intramurals, Esquires and Greek Week.

Their service projects included raising funds for March of Dimes and Muscular Dystrophy. They also sponsored several blood drives throughout the year.

The fraternity's colors are blue and silver. Their flower is the white rose.

Members held their White Rose formal in the spring and their Founder's Day Barbecue in the summer.

"I never thought I would grow so close to a group of guys," Jimmy Jones, Baytown senior, said. "Now that I'm graduating, a weird feeling hits me every once in a while. I'm never going to regret devoting my time and energy in Sig Tau. The fraternity is kept going by guys who strive to be number one on campus."

"Sig Tau gives more to its members than we could ever give to the fraternity," Jones said.

Tau Kappa Epsilon

"Above all else, Tau Kappa Epsilon stands for men . . . not for wealth, rank, or honor, but for personal worth and character," Paul Stehr, president, said.

Tau Kappa Epsilon members strive to promote brotherhood and to provide community services representative of the fraternity.

They raised $700 for St. Jude's Children Hospital and did service work for the Nacogdoches Treatment Center.

Other activities included a TKE bowling tournament in the fall, and a softball tournament in the spring.

Members attended a Christmas formal dance and a Red Carnation Ball in the spring.

"We are the largest international fraternity in the world," Stehr said. "We have a lot of traditions and rituals which we can be proud of."

"Our chapter sets goals by which we try to live," Stehr said. "We strive to become the number one fraternity both locally and nationally."

Tau Kappa Epsilon's colors are cherry red and gray. They chose Shannon Bennett as their Sweetheart.

Theta Chi

"We have set four chapter goals," Curtis Sparks, president, said. "These include promotion of brotherhood, development of leadership, academic achievement and self-improvement."

Theta Chi was founded in 1961 at SFA. The fraternity's philanthropic activities involve two charity fundraisers. The fall pledge class conducted a "cannon pull" to raise money for a memorial fund. Members also raised money for the March of Dimes.

Theta Chi encourages members to affiliate with other campus organizations to help them achieve personal goals.

The men participated in intramurals, Greek Week, SGA activities, honorary fraternities and service projects.

"Our fraternity combines the seriousness of scholarship with a well-balanced social program," Sparks said.

The fraternity was founded at Norwich, Vermont, on April 10, 1865. It has since grown into one of the largest fraternities in the nation.

Its colors are military red and white and its flower is the red carnation.

"Theta Chi fraternity provides men with an opportunity for a total collegiate experience," Sparks said. "It offers them a well-rounded education."

Zeta Tau Alpha

"The main purpose of Zeta Tau Alpha is to intensify friendships, to instill leadership and to be a service to the community," Lisa French, president, said.

The sorority was founded at SFA on March 19, 1977. Its members have become active participants in Sigma Chi Derby Week, Greek Week and many other campus events.

They raised money to help the Association of Retarded Citizens through a Christmas Bazaar. They attended a formal dance in Lafayette, La., and represented SFA at the Zeta State Day.

"We extend our friendship beyond the bounds of our sorority," French said. "We want to get to know other Greeks, independents, faculty, administration, the community and everybody we can."

Zeta Tau Alpha won the highest active member GPA and the spirit competition trophy during Homecoming.

'Jacks Finish Second in Conference

HESS

Like any football season, a team has its highs and lows throughout the year.

This was true of SFA's 1983 football season.

First the highs. The Jacks finished in second place in the Lone Star Conference standings for the second straight year, and were 28 seconds away from winning the conference championship. SFA finished the year with a 7-4 season record, which included a 5-2 conference mark.

In 1981 SFA owned a 1-10 mark before the arrival of Coach Jim Hess in 1982. Since Hess has taken over, the Jacks have had two straight winning seasons with a 6-4 record in 1982 and 1983's mark of 7-4.

The highlight of the year came on Oct. 22 in the Homecoming game. The Jacks knocked off Southwest Texas State University, 27-24, with a Rick Wilson field goal with 47 seconds left in the game.

"I had my foot wrapped in a towel in the fourth quarter. We had a feeling it might come down to a field goal. I was real positive and prayed a lot."

—Rick Wilson, kicker

The Jacks trailed 17-0 at halftime, but scored 24 second-half points, 17 in the fourth quarter to surprise the Bobcats.

Southwest entered the game ranked number one in Division II football rankings and were riding the nation's longest winning streak of 22 games. The Bobcats had back-to-back Division II titles to their credit. SFA tore down the goalpost after the game.

Quarterback Tod Weder was named Offensive Player of the Week by Sports Illustrated for his effort in the game.

"It was a great honor."
—Tod Weder, quarterback

Another bright spot for SFA was bringing Chief Caddo back to SFA with a 27-25 win over Northwestern State University. The chief had made his residence in Louisiana for the past eight years before the Jacks' win.

SFA had four players who were named by LSC officials as the Player of the Week. Offensively, receiver James Noble, quarterback John Farris and Weder received honors during the season, while defensive end Howard Wade captured the honor on defense.

Now the lows. The East Texas game tops the list—no doubt about it.

The Jacks entered the game in a three-way tie for first place with Southwest and East Texas. An SFA win would have put the Jacks in the drivers seat with one game remaining to win its first-ever football championship.

"We were 28 seconds away from a great year."
—Jim Hess, head coach

Other low points of the season came because of injuries. Defensive tackle Ed Stone injured his knee in the Jacks' opening game victory over Prairie View A&M. He was out for the year. The Jacks were hit with another heavy blow later in the season against Howard Payne University, as Weder, who finished the season as the individual leader in total offense, was sidelined for the final two games of the year with a dislocated elbow.

SFA Moves Up to Division I

On Sept. 1, 1983, Dr. William R. Johnson, SFA president, announced SFA was planning to form a new NCAA Division I athletic conference with four other teams from Texas and Louisiana. Since that time two additional teams have been added.

SFA plans to start competition in the new conference on Sept. 1, 1984. All sports will compete in Division I, with the exception of football, which will compete at the Division I-AA level.

The new conference will be called the Gulf Star. Its charter members will include Nicholls State University, Thibodaux, La.; Sam Houston State University, Huntsville, Texas; Southeastern Louisiana University, Hammond, La.; Southwest Texas State University, San Marcos, Texas; Northwestern State University, Natchitoches, La.; and Stephen F. Austin State University.

The move up will give SFA several distinct advantages. First, the geographic region for teams in the Gulf Star will be more centralized, so expenditures could be decreased for traveling purposes. Second, SFA will be in a better position for recruiting, as more full scholarships will be offered.

The third and most important advantage will be the exposure SFA will receive. Bigger name schools, with a reputation of playing well and having a well-rounded program, will improve SFA's competitive level, as well as increasing crowd support.

"Moving to Division I will enable us to give more scholarships and take more of the better athletes in our area than we have in the past."

—Jim Hess, Men's Athletic Director

Dr. Johnson was elected the first president of the league. Jim Hess was selected as the chairman of the new football conference and Max Corbet, SFA sports information director, will serve as chairman of the sports information directors.

Softball Takes Third in '83 Nationals

Baker

The 1983 Ladyjack softball season was the best in history, as the Ladyjacks finished with a record of 36-15. The team finished third in the NCAA Division II National Tournament.

Several players received individual honors. Senior Stacey Smith was named a Converse All-American, while Renee Smith was selected to the all-tournament team as a third baseman in the national meet.

Pitching was the key for SFA in 1983. The Ladyjack pitchers posted a team-earned average of 0.70 and threw 17 shutouts. Included in those 17 was a streak of five games in which opponents did not score a run.

Lumberjacks Shoot for Third Straight LSC Title

Miller

The two-time defending Lone Star Conference champion Lumberjacks posted another winning season in 1983-84. It was the final year of competition for the Jacks in the LSC. They will compete in the newly-formed Gulf Star Conference next season.

The Jacks closed out the regular season with a 19-8 overall record and a 9-5 conference mark. Their record was good enough for a fourth place finish in the conference going into the LSC tournament.

The Lumberjacks closed out their final game of the regular season in Commerce with an upset win over regular season conference champion East Texas State University, 75-72.

The Lumberjacks led the entire first half and went to the lockerroom with a 16-point lead. But the Lions fought back in the second half to tie the score at 70 with 1:05 remaining. A last-minute steal by Kevin Sumuel, who scored a career high 30 points in the game, and a three-point play by Johnny Taylor clinched the win for the Lumberjacks.

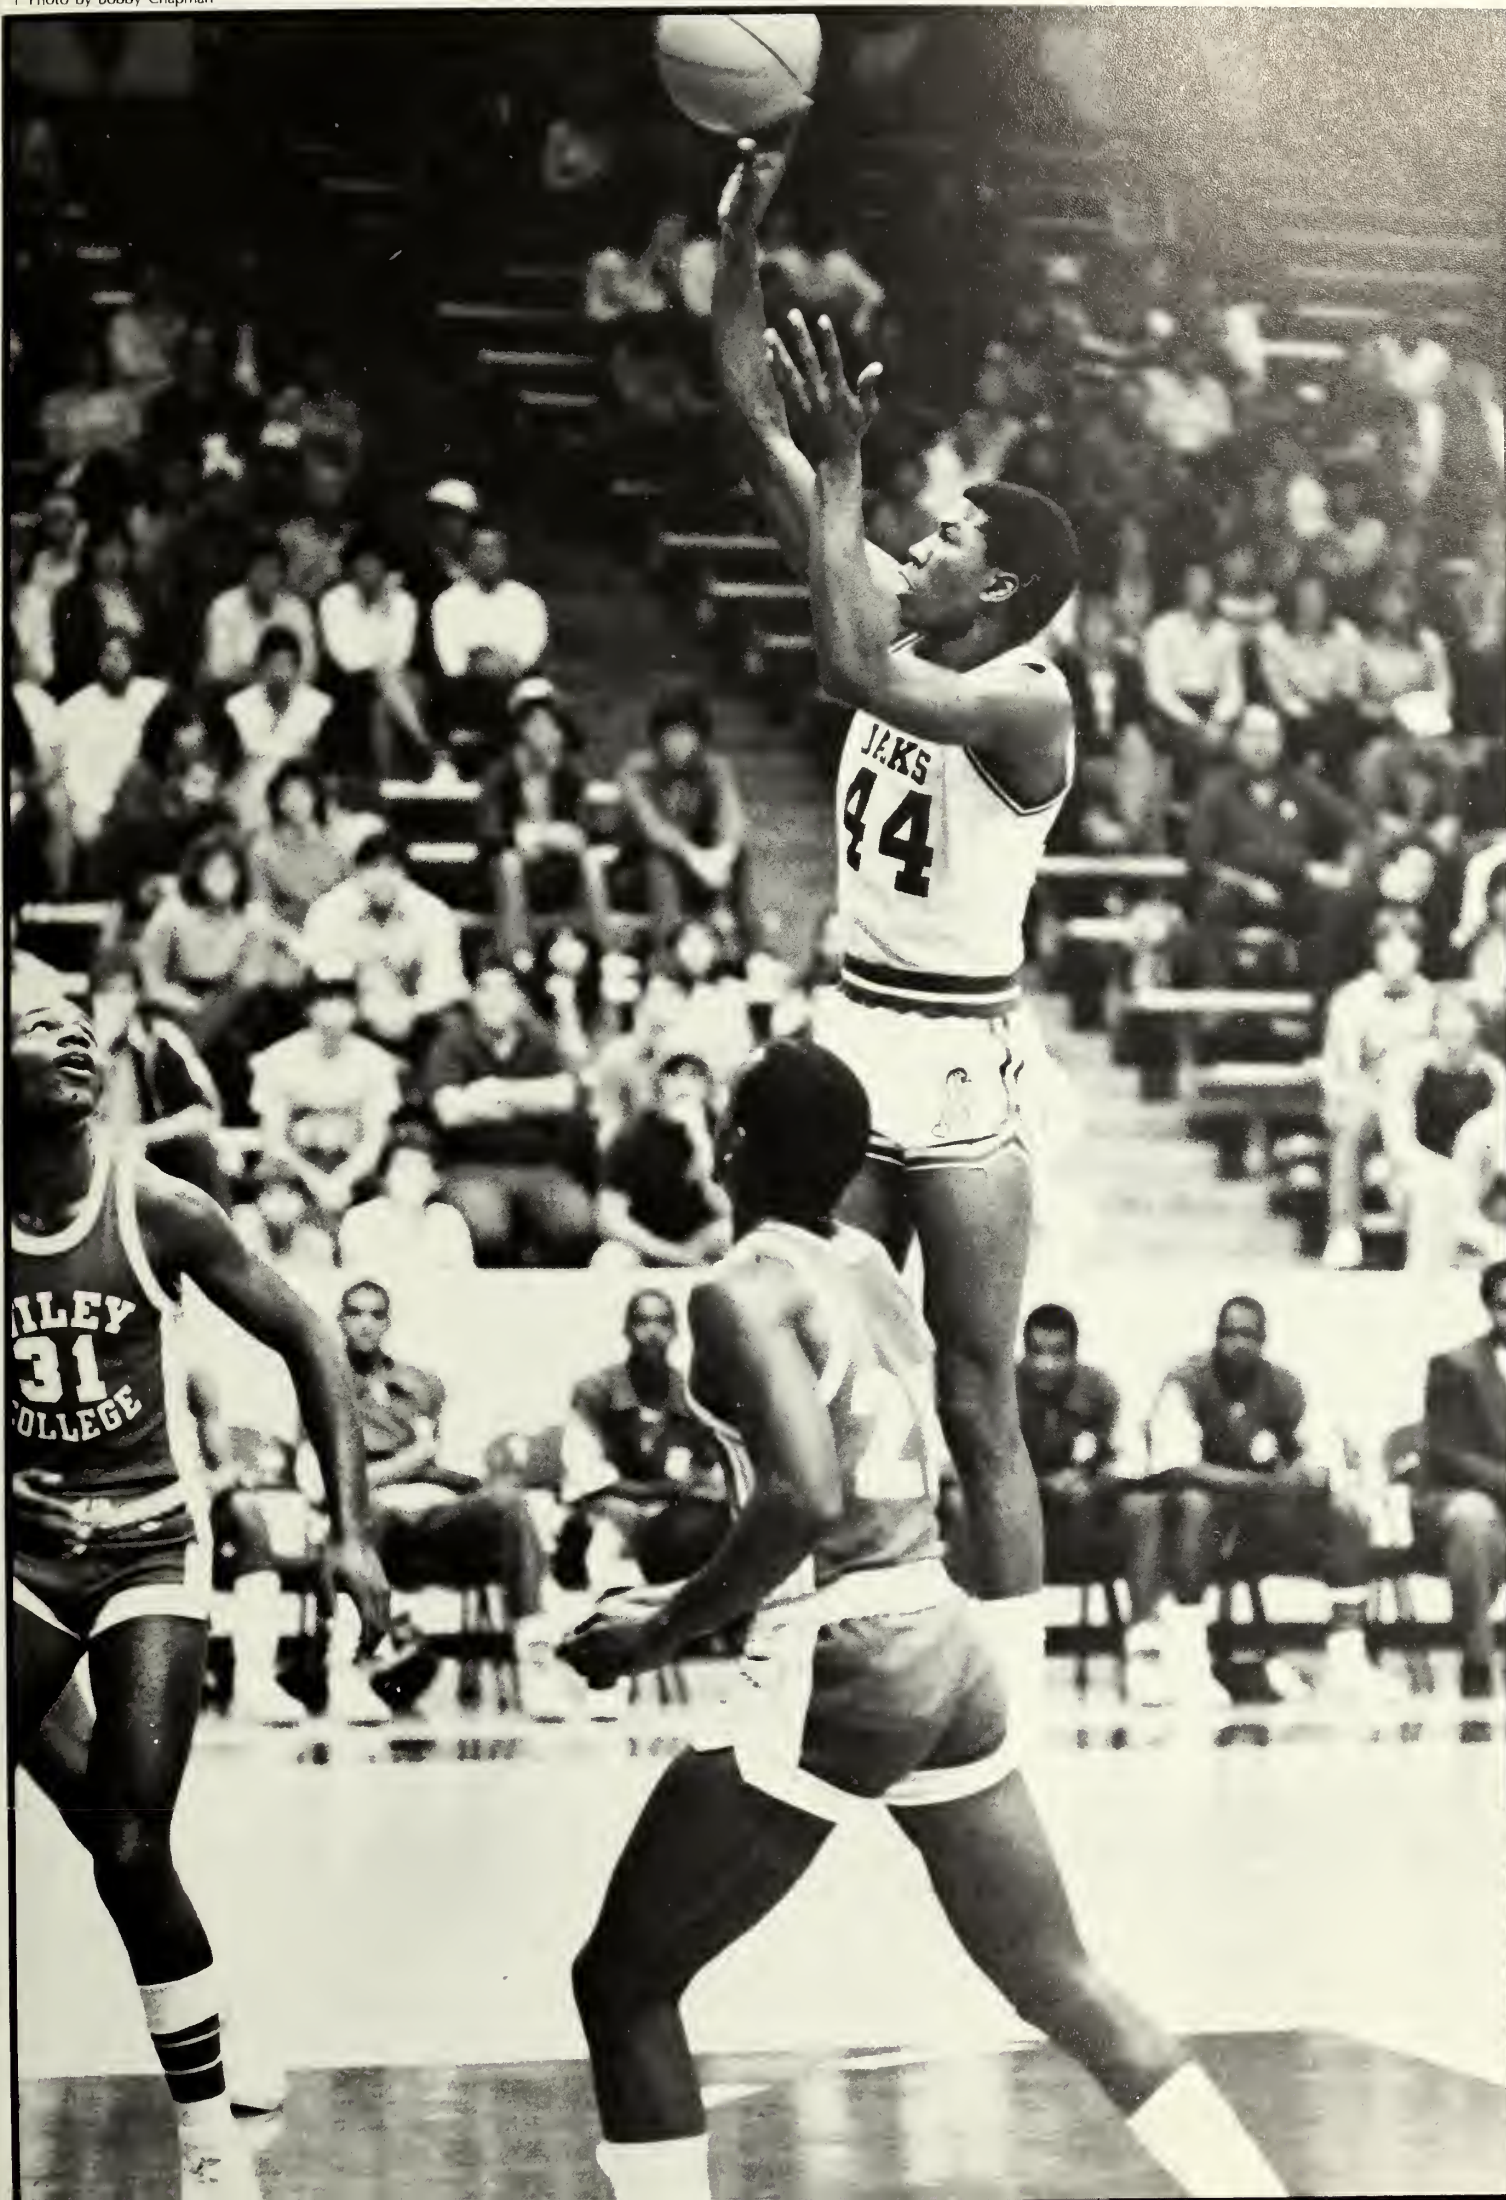

The Jacks started the season fast, winning three straight against Southern Arkansas, 70-56, giving them their first loss of the season.

The Jacks won three more games before losing two within 24 hours. The losses came on the road, to Texas Wesleyan College and Midwestern State University.

Basketball (Cont.)

The Jacks opened Lone Star Conference play in Abilene against Abilene Christian University. They won, upping their record to 10-3.

However, the Jacks lost their very next LSC contest to Angelo State University, 71-64. After beating Howard Payne University at home the Jacks lost to East Texas State University, 60-58. It was a rare home-court loss for the Lumberjacks, the first in three years.

On Feb. 9 the Sam Houston State University Bearkats came to town to continue the longest rivalry in Lone Star Conference history. The Jacks won the contest, 65-54. Sam Houston has never beaten the Lumberjacks in the 11 years that the Jacks have been playing in the Coliseum.

After dropping their second conference game to Angelo State, the Jacks closed out the season with three straight LSC wins.

Spirited Squad Supports Athletics

The SFA Cheerleaders promoted spirit on campus and helped support the Ladyjack and Lumberjack teams.

The team was very successful in their pep rallies in 1984 and were the first squad to be honored with the Angie Mercer Scholarship Award. The scholarship was given to the members having the highest GPA. Bill Myers, Beth Leimbach and Angie Lipsey were the recipients for the 1983-84 school year.

The team was recognized by the National Cheerleaders Association as

Ladyjacks Roundballers Have Up and Down Season

Coach Wilhelm

At the start of their 1983-84 season, the Ladyjacks were listed in the top 20 of the Street and Smith's College and Pro Basketball pre-season selections.

Tammy Mayo, senior forward, was listed in the magazine as a pre-season All-American Honorable Mention selection.

The Ladies' season opened Nov. 10 with a 95-79 victory over Oklahoma State University. They then went on to defeat Texas Tech University 65-63 and the University of Missouri 81-79 in the Queens Classic in Plainview. The Ladies fell to Clemson University 95-75 to give the Ladyjacks the second place crown in the classic.

The lady Cougars of the University of Houston downed the Ladyjacks 61-59 to bring the Ladies' record to 3-2.

On Dec. 3 the Ladyjacks ousted Southwest Texas State University 83-60 and on Dec. 6, the Ladies conquered the ladies of Texas A&M University 93-65.

Two losses, one to McNeese State University 81-74 and the other to Northeast Louisiana University 101-72, brought the Ladyjack record to 5-4.

High scorers after nine games were Tammy Mayo with 72 points; Paula Redo, guard, 60; Sybil Johnson, post, 58; and Rosalind Polk, senior guard, 34.

The Ladyjacks concluded their 1983 portion of the season by capturing the first place title in the Dallas Classic at Southern Methodist University, Dallas, on Dec. 16 and 17.

The Ladies defeated the lady Buckeyes of Ohio State University 94-

88. This win took the Ladyjacks into the finals against the host school, Southern Methodist University. The Ladies kept control the whole game to defeat SMU 77-64.

Polk was named Most Valuable Player in the tournament. She was also named to the All-Tournament Team along with Mayo.

The Ladyjacks began their 1984 season with two defeats. The nationally ranked University of Georgia stomped the Ladyjacks 106-51. Then the Ladies fell to the Lady Tigers of Auburn University 43-29.

On Jan. 23 the Ladies defeated the Southern University Lady Jaguars 72-63. They went on to lose a heart-breaker to Northeast Louisiana University 74-70. This dropped the Ladyjack's record to 9-8.

Mary Ann Otwell Resigns Ladyjack Head Coaching Position

1. Photo by Craig Elliott

Fourth year SFA basketball coach Mary Ann Otwell resigned her coaching position this year.

The announcement was made on Dec. 6, 1983, by Women's Athletic Director Sadie Allison. She said Otwell would be assigned other duties at SFA.

Otwell stated she was resigning for philosophical reasons.

"At this point in time it's best that I go ahead and remove myself."

-Mary Ann Otwell

Otwell came to SFA in 1978 as an assistant coach to Sue Gunter. She took over the helm in 1980, leading SFA to three straight post-season tournament appearances. Her record at SFA was 61-29.

Prior to coming to SFA in 1978, Otwell spent four years at Panola Junior College as the head basketball coach. She took the team to back-to-back junior college national championships in her final two seasons as head coach.

While at Panola, she coached four All-Americans, three who went on to star at SFA, including Rosie Walker.

Assistant Ladyjack basketball coach Don Wilhelm served as the interim coach.

Wilhelm had joined the Ladyjack staff this year after spending the previous five years at Johnson County Community College in Kansas as head coach for men's basketball.

Setting for the Future

1. Burns

The 1983-84 volleyball team was a young team with a new coach.

Coach Sheri Burns took over the helm and produced a squad with great potential. She came to SFA with high coaching credentials from such schools as University of Wyoming and California State at Fullerton.

"It was a building year. We were young and it takes awhile to get adjusted, but we'll be stronger and stronger as time goes on."

—Cindy Matlock, freshman player

"I saw a lot of progress. We're on our way to turning this program into a viable intercollegiate team," Coach Burns said.

The team was comprised of five returnees and five freshman newcomers. Lack of experience was the major weak point of the team. "We had a lot of close matches because of our inexperience," Burns said.

"We had a lot of potential, but had trouble getting it altogether because we were a young team."

—Eileen McDonald, sophomore

In the game of volleyball, a high level of unity must exist among the players. "Our strong point was our high level of team unity," Burns said.

Golf Team Traveled to Bahamas

Alexander

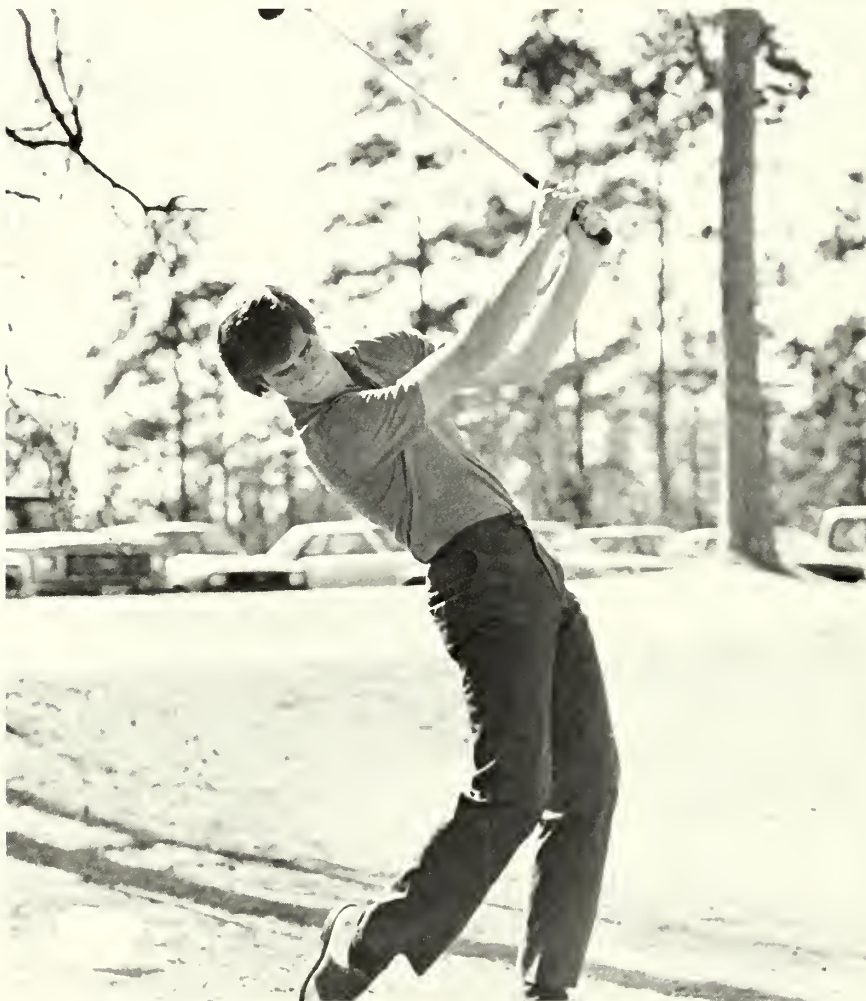

The SFA golf team did well in the 1983-84 season. It was a group of both old and new talent which traveled across the state making a name for itself as a first rate team.

The golfers competed in several major tournaments including the Bahamas Invitational in Freeport, Bahamas. In March, the team traveled to the University of Houston to compete in the All-American tournament. Assistant golf coach Greg Chapman said, "That's the biggest tournament in the United States."

During the Fall Semester, the team was guided by fellow student Greg Chapman who turned pro upon graduation. Head golf coach Clyde Alexander took over in the spring after assisting the football team the previous semester.

President Strives for SFA Excellence

"I feel very fortunate to be here (SFA). It is a university that has reached its sixtieth year but still is maturing and developing its programs; but also one that sees its students as the center of its primary mission. Its thrust is at quality," said Dr. William R. Johnson, president of SFA.

Dr. Johnson came to SFA from Texas Tech. "All of the moving around gives you a better perspective on what you're doing and on how other people do things. It broadens your experience," he said.

"My favorite place, of course, is SFA. All the campuses are different. Each has its own character; each has its own emphasis," said Dr. Johnson.

Dr. Johnson said that even in over 60 years there are things that have not changed.

"The main thing is that people are here to exchange knowledge and are growing intellectually. I think that they always will. The students know more about their world than they have in the past," he said.

Dr. Johnson said that he liked the challenges of his job and interacting with people. He said, "I don't like litigation. It uses a lot of time to an unproductive end. You aren't doing what you need to when you spend time on that."

Dr. Johnson said that SFA is an alternative to a larger university. He said, "If we had 20 to 25 thousand students, it would be different. Our challenge is to keep it the way it is as it grows—to preserve the things we like about SFA. My own hope is that it will be a place where the student is the center of it all. There is a drive for excellence here. SFA is a student-centered university and that's what makes it so good."

Vice Presidents: Leaders Who Serve

"I think I would like to see us strengthen our offerings," said Dr. Edwin W. Gaston, vice president for academic affairs. "It's not so much adding offerings, although I'm not opposed to that if it's needed. But I think we ought to continue to improve what we have. Call it a fine tuning process. I think we'll become more computerized in instruction and learning. Out of old technology will arise new."

Dr. Gaston is in charge of the deans, the faculty and the library. He is also responsible for recruiting students and for the education of those students.

Dr. Gaston said, "I don't teach anymore, but I still continue to call myself a teacher. I miss teaching, on some days more than others. The greatest pleasure I derive is working with and helping students."

"I love it (Texas)!" said Don Henry, vice president for administrative and fiscal affairs. "We (Henry's family) feel very much a part of the state now. There are many differences between the states, primarily in the amount of money state legislatures are willing to commit to higher education," he said. "The total number of tax dollars put into Texas education, including elementary, secondary and higher education, is about 52 percent of their operating budget."

Henry said, "Our 'mission' is providing support services (physical plant), maintaining the physical plant so that the lights will work when the teachers walk into their classrooms, making sure the floor is clean, and providing a good environment for teaching and learning," he said.

"We also manage the financial resources of the school," Henry said. "We collect student fees and account for all revenue the institution receives, which amounts to about $48,646,000 estimated income this year."

Henry also said, "We (the office) report regularly to several state agencies on student enrollment, plans for future finances and building programs. Another big part of it is working with the campus community in planning new facilities and seeing these facilities designed and constructed. This past year, we've had $20 million in new building projects. I'm primarily responsible for seeing they are done the right way," he said.

For Dr. Baker Pattillo, vice president for university affairs, working at SFA is not just a job, but a way of life. Dr. Pattillo said, "You never get away from it. You just live an SFA life."

Dr. Pattillo's responsibilities give him varied opportunities for diverse student contacts. "Basically the areas I work in are not academic, financial, or fiscal in nature," said Dr. Pattillo. "My responsibilities include housing, placement, guidance and counseling, student publications, the health clinic, intramural and intercollegiate sports, the University Center—everything from cafeterias to the bookstore, the post office to the game room."

Such nonacademic areas, though, contribute to the total educational process, according to Dr. Pattillo. He believes that the ability to meet people, to negotiate and compromise with them are learned outside the classroom in activities and organizations.

Because Dr. Pattillo is himself an SFA graduate, he is in a unique position to understand student problems. "When students come to me," he explained, "they say that I don't understand parking problems or housing problems. I can remember my student days. I've lived in the Units, Dorm 16, the Staff Apartments and the Clark Apartments."

Dr. Pattillo said that he has seen changes in students over the years.

"There was a questioning in the 70s, a feeling of unrest. Since then, students have seemed to be serious about education and their careers. Many look ahead to lifestyles for themselves and their families. They aren't looking for immediate gratification," he said.

Dr. Pattillo's hobby is spending time with his six-year-old daughter. "I spend all day with adults and students," said Dr. Pattillo. "It is very refreshing to be with her. You see life through the eyes of a six-year-old child."

"This office has a broad scope of activities and responsibilities," said Dr. Nancy Speck, assistant vice president for academic affairs. "We are concerned with the maintenance of quality and standards in all areas of instruction."

Academic affairs represents the academic area to the parents, the community and the many state and federal agencies involved in higher education. It is also involved in long-range planning, and development of special programs and support groups.

Dr. Speck also teaches business courses. She said, "Holding this position and teaching is difficult in that I have time conflicts. I am able to handle it because I have good people working with me. The interaction in the classroom keeps me grounded and reminds me that what I do in the office is for the students."

She believes that teaching gives her job the personal touch.

Dr. Speck said that sometimes people become so absorbed in what they are doing that they begin thinking that they have to do something just because "it needs to be done."

Dr. Speck said, "I have seen changes over the decade. Students are now more committed to working for the system, not against it."

Crucial Administrative Legal and Support Services

The Office of Admissions recruited students to SFA by visiting high schools on college nights and by visiting the campuses of junior colleges. The Office of Admissions arranges tours of the campus and of SFA residence halls for prospective students.

Dr. Clyde Iglinsky is Director of the Office of Admissions. J.R. Wright is Associate Director of Admissions. Nancy Dunn and Carolyn Hardy are Assistant Directors of Admissions.

Dr. Richard Voigtal, director of affirmative action, said, "The job of this department is to monitor all new hires, both professional and staff, to make sure that all searches for employment are in accordance with federal guidelines."

The Office of Affirmative Action works with the various academic departments. "The departments must establish a search committee made up of peers to find prospective employment," Dr. Voigtal said. "Our department works directly under the president and I'm essentially a one-man department."

The Director of Development is the primary source of contact with people in the private sector carrying out the gift policy established by the Board of Regents.

The Director of Development, Clyde Carman, coordinates and records gifts received from the private sector.

The Office of Financial Aid assists students who need financial support to attend college. Students must show financial need by completing forms required by the state and federal governments. The four primary types of financial assistance are loans, grants, scholarships and part-time employment. Approximately 4,000 students apply for aid each year, with about 2,000 receiving some kind of assistance. Programs offered by the University include the Pell Grants, National Direct Student Loan Program, Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants, College Work Study Program, Hinson-Hazelwood College Student Loan Program and short-term loans.

The Office of Financial Aid keeps on file all current part-time jobs, both on and off campus, to assist students who wish to work while attending SFA.

Curtis Bradshaw is Director of Student Financial Aid. Nancy Weyland is Associate Director of Financial Aid.

About 5,000 students live in University housing residence halls and apartments. Living on campus enables students to experience a unique way of life.

Pete Smith, director of housing, is in charge of campus living arrangements. He accepts applications for housing, giving priority for residence halls to incoming freshmen based on the time the application is received.

Assignments are not given until after the applicants are approved for academic admission to the University.

Smith is also in charge of giving permission to students who request permits to live off campus. Permission is given to students with the required number of hours and to those with exceptional circumstances. Single undergraduates are also granted permission to live off campus when facilities are not available in University residence halls because of SFA's growing student population.

Thomas Walton is Associate Director of Housing and shares the director's duties.

Robert J. Provan, legal counselor for SFA, said, "My primary function is to advise the President and administration on legal matters." His duties include keeping the administration informed on state and national legislative rulings and reviewing all contracts for the University and aiding in its policy formation.

Provan, former assistant attorney general in Austin, has been legal counselor for SFA for six years. He taught part time during the first two years of his work with the University. He is the only attorney to serve as SFA's counsel.

Walter Simonds, student legal counsel, offers free legal counseling to students at SFA. "I'll talk to them about the legal ramifications of anything they want to talk to me about," said Simonds. "I don't represent them, but I try to give them their alternatives and some additional information to make a good decision."

Simonds has offered advice to students about alcohol-related problems, landlords and tenants, traffic tickets, automobile accidents, lawsuits and family law problems. According to Simonds, only about four percent of the students came to him with university-related cases in the 1982-83 school year.

"This is something I take pride in. The University has to be doing a reasonable job or else there would be more folks knocking on my door wanting to know what's going on," he said.

Simonds said he likes providing students with an educational experience and more knowledge about the rules of what's going on around them.

"Students sometimes feel helpless, but this knowledge can sometimes give them an advantage the other side doesn't have."

As director of the Ralph W. Steen Library, Alvin C. Cage is responsible for the overall operations of the library. Those operations include supervision of a staff of 50 full-time employees and 100 student employees; acquisition of equipment; development of library collections; and the coordination of library services with the development of academic programs throughout the University.

Library holdings include 315,000 catalogued books, 67,000 bound volumes of periodicals, 224,000 documents, 14,000 reels of microfilm and 498,000 units of microtext. In addition, 3,932 periodicals are currently received.

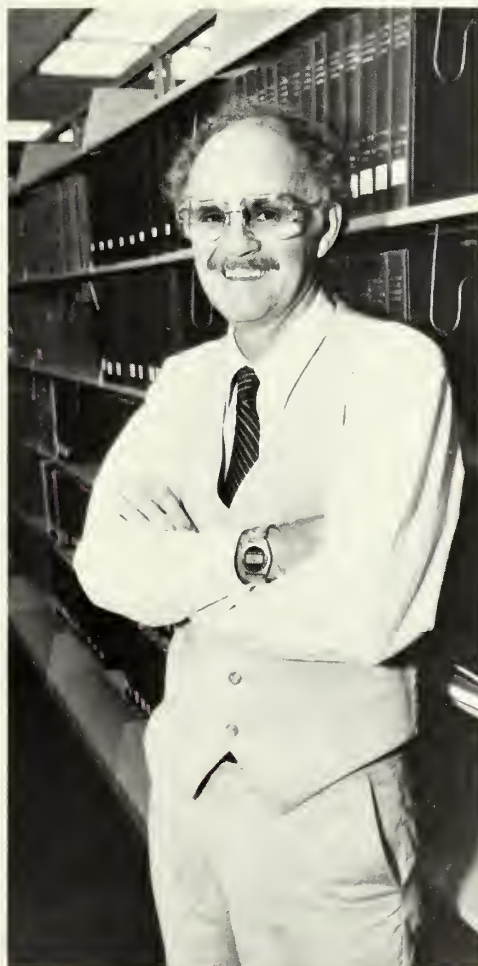

Several special collections are housed in the university library.

The Curriculum Collection serves as a laboratory facility for students in the teacher education programs and consists of state-adopted text-books, curriculum bulletins, and books for children and young people. The Audiovisual section includes music recordings (discs and tapes), music scores, films, filmstrips, transparencies, and slides. Although the Audiovisual section supports the audiovisual educational needs of all students and faculty, a major portion of the materials and equipment particularly serves the needs of the music student. There are approximately 1750 music recordings and 3300 scores. A variety of listening and viewing equipment is available for student use in the department.

The Government Documents Department is a depository for selected U.S. Government publications and contains many state documents as well. The special collections area emphasizes many materials that relate to the life, culture, industry and history of East Texas, including a forest history collection. Because of the quality and size of this phase of Special Collections, the library is designated an official forest history repository by the Forest History Foundation of St. Paul, Minnesota.

"Our major area of concern is the maintaining and updating of our student files," said Eugene Barbin, registrar. "We keep academic transcripts and grades." But the Office of the Registrar does more than just keep records. They also keep track of the courses students need to complete their degree requirements. They provide literally hundreds of transcripts for students, and they certify students for grants. They also handle academic course inventories.

The Office of the Registrar tabulates the number of students enrolled in each course. The tabulation enables the University to receive state funds.

Van P. Samford, director of placement, has been at SFA for 22 years. He has served in this position for 11 of those years.

Samford, an SFA graduate, helps students get jobs in their chosen area. He contacts companies with openings in the students' field of study in an effort to place them where they are best qualified. Student files are updated and vacancy lists are mailed to graduates who request them.

"The operation is available to the student at no cost, save that of the price it takes to copy a transcript," he said.

Services are offered to students through scheduling of campus interviews with employers, maintaining and reproducing credentials, disseminating information concerning job vacancies and the use of an extensive career library.

"The student development concept is carried out through a number of programs and services administered by the Office of Student Development," William E. Porter, dean of student development, said.

"Support and assistance to a wide variety of student organizations is the primary thrust of this effort.

"Through their programs and with the guidance and assistance of administrators and faculty advisers, these organizations give direction to the development of students." The Office of Student Development works very closely with the major organizations of SFA such as the Student Government Association, the Residence Hall Association, fraternities and sororities. Over 150 student organizations meet a wide range of needs that are an integral part of the university experience. This office is responsible for the campus judicial system and the maintenance of university policies and regulations. The Student Development Office also maintains the various UC programs and committees, the arts and crafts center and the graphic shop. As well as the many programs it oversees, the Student Development Office offers assistance to students on personal or university related problems.

Dr. Ernestine Henry is Associate Dean of Student Development.

Dr. Jack Nelson is Director of Auxiliary Services. "This area primarily covers those services for students that are not provided for by state funds. We have to be self-sufficient," said Dr. Nelson.

Auxiliary services include the University Center, the book store, food services, housing, and the post office.

"In each area we have managers, each responsible for their own areas. I am ultimately responsible for seeing that we follow personnel procedures, maintain fiscal accountability and operate along University guidelines," said Dr. Nelson.

"I like the opportunity to be able to evaluate a program, make plans for improvement, watch for growth in the area and realize that I had an instrumental part in the process. I enjoy being a change maker. If you're not changing, you're not growing. If you're not growing, then you are standing still, he said.

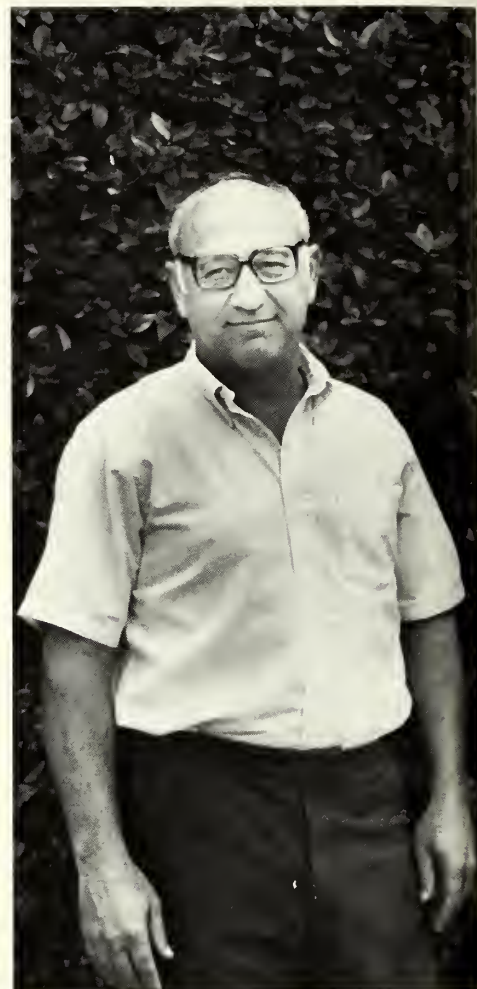

"I enjoy working with not only a fine institution, but a fine academic institution. Nacogdoches County is an excellent place to live. I really enjoy it."

Ken Kennamer is Director of the University News Service. "Striving to disseminate information about the University to attract students and enhance the image of the University," is the business of this office.

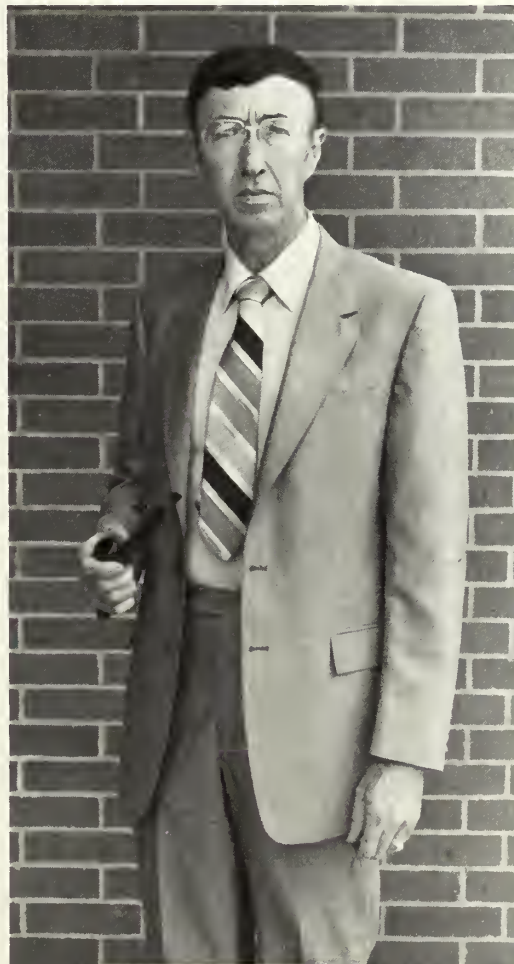

University News tells the SFA story to the state at large. They disseminate accounts of student awards, scholarships, administrative activities, academic programs and progress. Quarterly, they produce Sawdust, the SFA alumni magazine. University News also publishes press guides to SFA athletic programs.

"Our number one objective is to provide a perimeter of protection for our campus community," said Ben Wright, chief of University Police.

students in getting to their classes, escorts students home from late-night meetings and helps students retrieve keys from locked cars.

The UPD is responsible for the protection of public and private property, public safety and the enforcement of University regulations and of the laws and ordinances of the city of Nacogdoches and the State of Texas.

Counseling Offered in Four Areas

"The primary purpose of our office (Guidance and Counseling) is to provide one-to-one counseling for the student who has problems," Melvin H. Wester, director of guidance and counseling, said.

Wester said counseling is offered in four areas: vocational, educational, personal and social.

Students needing career counseling are offered the use of the System of Interactive Guidance and Information, a computer-based program that allows students to explore career choices. Guidance and Counseling also maintains a career library with information pertaining to the various career fields available. The student is offered all of these opportunities so that they have the opportunity to explore all avenues of career choices.

Wester said that a large part of the counseling done by the office involves educational counseling, including helping students develop better study skills.

"Personal counseling includes problems of every nature, such as adjustment to college life, roommate problems, feelings of low self-concept and depression," Wester said.

He said the most serious personal problem encountered is students with suicidal intent. But personal counseling also includes family problems.

Guidance and Counseling is also responsible for various activities. The Alcohol and Drug Abuse center offers material concerning responsible drinking. Counselors present programs on alcohol abuse to residence halls, social groups or to any group that requests it. They also present programs on stress management, study skills and adjustment problems.

Guidance and Counseling maintains an office in the Academics Assistance Center to help students. Around four study skills seminars are held each semester; other workshops are in the planning stages.

"We want to provide a place where students will feel free to come and discuss with counselors any type of problem. If something is bothering a student, we feel it's important for him or her to have a place to come and talk about it," Wester said.

Dean Promotes 'Crime-Stoppers'

Dr. James O. Standley, dean of the School of Applied Arts and Sciences, says that the purpose of his office is to see that students get a good education by bringing faculty into direct contact with students to learn what their needs are.

As associate editor of the Texas Police Journal, Dean Standley does manuscript editing and consulting work in community-based corrections programs. He has worked to help establish the Crime-Stoppers program in Nacogdoches.

For the past two years, much of Dean Standley's time has been spent fulfilling his responsibilities as president of the Association of Texas Law Enforcement Educators. The office has involved him in state-wide activity upgrading programs providing continuing education for law enforcement people.

Asked about his nonprofessional life, Dean Standley said, "I spend a lot of time playing dad (to two boys). I go to a lot of soccer games." He is also working on restoring an antique car—a 1915 Ford.

Social Work

The Social Work Program tries to provide students with the knowledge and skills they will need to enter the field of social work at a professional level.

Students are prepared to work in public welfare, mental health, mental retardation, state hospitals, treatment centers and drug treatment centers.

After students complete the general education requirements, they must take courses from the supportive disciplines of economics, psychology, sociology and professional social work.

Criminal Justice Program

The Criminal Justice Program is for students who wish to enter the field of Administration of Justice.

Students in this program are prepared to work in such fields as law enforcement, corrections/probation, prison and parole, legal assistance and private security. The student may also choose a career working with juvenile delinquents.

SFA's Criminal Justice students are eligible for membership in Lambda Alpha Epsilon, the American Criminal Justice Association.

Academically qualified students may join Alpha Phi Sigma, the national Criminal Justice honor society. SFA is also an institutional member of the Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences.

Military Science Courses Offered to All Students

The Department of Military Science offers courses to all persons, male and female. The courses may be taken with no military service obligation.

Qualified students can participate in the Reserve Officer Training Corps pre-commissioning programs. In this program, students are able to earn a commission as a second lieutenant in the regular army, army reserve or the National Guard while attending college.

Military Science courses may substitute for activity courses.

The Department of Military Science provides all necessary classroom and laboratory equipment for students.

Requirements for the admission of freshmen to the ROTC program are the same as those for admission to the University.

Dean Pleased with Computer Facilities

According to Dr. Janelle C. Ashley, dean of the School of Business, the school has targeted advising for special attention this year. "We work with over 4,000 major students," she said.

"With the growth in student demands," Dean Ashley said, "we are constantly recruiting faculty resources in a tight labor market. We feel we have made progress, but we are still in a recruiting mode.

"We work very closely with the Placement Center in order to maintain a close working relationship that will ultimately employ our students."

Since Dr. Ashley has been dean, the graduate program has been accredited. She says she is particularly pleased with additional computer facilities and anxious to acquire additional video equipment.

The school has several active student organizations that provide both social and professional interactions for students.

Dean Ashley is vice-president of Nacogdoches United Way, vice-president of the Chamber of Commerce and Chairman of the Administrative Board of the First Methodist Church.

Department of Accounting

The School of Business comprises five departments: accounting, administrative services, computer science, economics and management.

The Department of Accounting tries to develop accountants that can efficiently serve in public, private or governmental positions. Courses are also offered to serve the particular needs of the non-accounting major.

The department offers training for the pre-professional and professional accountant. Courses provide information in double-entry bookkeeping, financial statement analysis and the use of financial planning.

The Department of Accounting also offers a graduate program which helps prepare the student for executive positions in both public and private accounting. Students who are pursuing non-accounting careers can gain helpful insight into the use of financial data for decision-making. Students admitted to the MBA program may emphasize accounting.

Administrative Services

The Department of Administrative Services tries to develop competent men and women who can work in responsible business positions. The department gives the student background knowledge and skills in communications and administrative law necessary for the business world.

Two broadfield teaching areas are offered. They do not require a second teaching field. The first area is Composite Business which includes shorthand. The second area, Basic Business, does not include shorthand. Two second teaching fields are also offered—Business Administration and Business, Secretarial.

The department offers a graduate program which serves to provide background knowledge in business law, business communications, research techniques and reports necessary for advancement in the business community.

Computer Science

The Department of Computer Science gives students a chance to obtain a broad education in computer science, yet at the same time lays the foundation for professional competence in the computer field.

The department utilizes the University Computer Center and the Computer Science Laboratory. The computer center is open 24 hours a day.

Student enrollment in the Fall 1983

Semester almost tripled the fall enrollment of 1975. Two-thousand and one-hundred students enrolled in 1983 compared to the 825 students who enrolled in 1975.

The department gives students a pragmatic program combined with background theory and actual program writing.

The department also offers the Master of Science degree program.

Department of Economics and Finance

The Department of Economics and Finance prepares students to become professional leaders who can meet the challenges put before them.

A student may major in economics or finance. Minors are available in both fields.

A student who chooses a major in economics or finance has an opportunity for a career in several different areas such as banking, insurance, financial management, research and analysis, real estate, investments, teaching or government service.

Each year the department awards a scholarship to an outstanding student enrolled in a real estate program.

The Texas Real Estate Research Center sponsors the scholarship.

The department also offers opportunities for the MBA degree. Students may select an emphasis in economics. The advance courses in economics give the student a deeper understanding of changing economic institutions.

Management and Marketing

The objective of the management program is to help the student understand the nature and capabilities of human and physical resources. The department prepares students to enter such fields as administration, executive positions, production management, management consultants, or proprietor-management.

Through the marketing program, students are prepared for careers in such fields as retail, manufacturing, distribution, marketing research, advertising and personal selling. Marketing deals primarily with understanding the process of satisfying the individual's and organization's needs.

Marketing courses are oriented toward the basic knowledge of tools, organizations and institutions utilized in performing marketing functions. The courses are also aimed at developing the ability within the student to implement marketing policy, strategy and procedures. Marketing problems and decision making are also covered in the courses.

Courses in management and marketing may be taken as part of the MBA requirements.

School Provides Well-Balanced Program

Teacher education at SFA is synonymous with the history of the University. The first name given the University, Stephen F. Austin State Teachers College, was indicative of the importance of teacher training.

Today, majors in the School of Education make up 17 percent of the University's enrollment. The school consistently has more than 2,000 majors with approximately 90 percent of those pursuing a state certification for teaching in public schools. The number graduating each year from the school ranges from 500 to 550.

Programs in teacher education are accredited by the State Board of Education, the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools and the National Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education.

"Our students are very attractive to school districts throughout the state. We feel they are very well-equipped in basic skills and professional pedagogy. We work hard at providing a well-balanced teacher education program, and then we assist the student in every way possible as they seek their professional appointments," said Dean Langston Kerr.

"We want school districts to prefer teachers trained at SFASU," he said.

"I graduated from Garrison High School, and I think that's one of the better things that happened to me. There were 22 in my graduating class and there are few groups that have better ties than that group.

"My inspiration to become a teacher grew out of that school. Two of the dearest life-long friends of mine showed an interest in me as early as the eighth grade. One was the high school principal and the other was the superintendent. I thought then that if I could do what they were doing, I ought not get paid for it. It looked like a lot of fun," said Dean Kerr.

Departments Offer Teacher Preparation

The departmental offerings of the University provide the preparation required for teaching certificates granted in Texas. Teacher education is considered an institution-wide function with the Departments of Counseling and Special Educational Programs, Elementary Education, and Secondary Education providing professional instruction and directing the institution's resources toward the objective of well-prepared teachers. All of the programs in the University leading to certification for teaching or for school service are coordinated through the School of Education.

The teacher education function of the University is to equip able persons for entrance into and success in the teaching profession and thus to further the education of children and youth in Texas.

Teacher certification programs include elementary education, secondary education, all-level certification and the counseling and special education. Dean of the School of Education is Dr. W. Langston Kerr.

The Department of Agriculture presents to students new challenges in business, education, communications and conservation as well as in agricultural production and management. A student who wishes to become a high school teacher of vocational agriculture should choose the curriculum in agricultural education. One who is interested in a particular phase of agricultural production, research, business or other phase of agriculture should specialize in animal science, plant or soil science, agribusiness, horticulture, agricultural machinery or preveterinary-animal science.

The agricultural internship is designed to strengthen the major field of emphasis and provide a stronger base of employment. The internship consists of spending one regular semester in a prescribed training program on the job full-time at an agricultural or related business. Dr. Thomas J. Stanley is the department chairman.

The objectives of the Department of Counseling and Special Educational programs include the preparation of special education teachers and speech therapists for elementary and secondary schools; the preparation of persons for careers in rehabilitation, orientation and mobility and related human services and handicapped; and preparation for graduate study in education, counseling, rehabilitation counseling, special or educational psychology.

Rehabilitation services personnel assist the handicapped in achieving the greatest physical, mental, social, educational and vocational potential of which they are capable.

The orientation and mobility specialist provides visually impaired children and adults with those skills and services which will enable the individual to move independently in familiar and unfamiliar environments.

Through the courses and laboratory experiences offered, the Department of Elementary Education seeks to provide students with an understanding of the historical, philosophical and psychological foundations of education and to help them acquire the knowledge and skills necessary for successful teaching in early childhood and elementary school classrooms.

The primary purposes of the Health and Physical Education Department are related to the preparation of health education, physical education and dance teachers and the development of total fitness and recreational sports skills of the college community through programs of fitness and lifetime sports. In addition, programs leading to endorsement and certification are offered in the areas of athletic training, driver education, first aid and water safety. The department offers opportunities for the preparation of athletic coaches. Students are encouraged to participate in the activities of the departmental professional club and other related departmental activities. Opportunities for performance and production experience are afforded through the departmental dance company which performs twice annually on the university campus and/or in area school and cities. Admission to the company is by audition.

Carolyn Mitchell is Coordinator of Graduate Studies. Dr. David Shows is director of the fitness and lifetime sports division. Virginia J. Mathews is the director of the dance division. Dr. James DiNucci is director of the physical education professional studies division. Dorothy Allen is director of the health education division. Dr. Carl R. Kight is chairman of the department.

Home economics is a field of study concerned with all aspects of family living, their interrelationships and the total patterns which they form. The objectives of the Department of Home Economics, in keeping with the nature of home economics, are the personal development of each student, preparation for home and family living, preparation for a profession and service to the people of this area. Dr. Gloria E. Durr is chairman of the department.

The program of professional secondary education at the undergraduate level is based on a critical selection of the things a teacher should know and be able to teach in the secondary school. Through its courses the department seeks to provide basic concepts in the history and philosophy of education, in the teaching-learning process, in the nature of the adolescent learner, in the planning and organizing for teaching and

Dean Directs University Scholars

The School of Fine Arts, one of the first schools established at SFA, includes four departments: art, communication, music and theater.

"Each department of the school makes a contribution to the general education program at SFA," Dr. Robert G. Sidnell, dean of the School of Fine Arts, said. "In addition to programs for majors and minors, the school offers studies for the general student."

Dean Sidnell said that communications is the largest department in the school, offering strong programs in journalism, broadcasting, photojournalism and speech.

Approximately 1,000 undergraduates are minoring in fine arts. One hundred students are enrolled in the graduate program.

The School of Fine Arts is housed in the Rusk, Boynton, Music Buildings and in two art buildings.

"One of my jobs is being director of the University Scholars Program. I also teach in the Music department and edit a journal in psychomusicology," Dean Sidnell said.

Dean Sidnell said that he intensely enjoys teaching and wouldn't want to relinquish that part of the job.

Dean Sidnell has been at SFA for six years, and the University has grown by about 25 percent during that time.

Four Choices Offered to Art Majors

The School of Fine Arts consists of four departments: art, communications, music and theatre.

Students interested in majoring in art have four degree plans from which to choose. Plan one is for students who are interested in careers in either commercial art or fine arts. Plan two is for students who wish to obtain a teaching certificate at a secondary level. With plan three, students can obtain an all-level teaching certificate. For students who are seeking a broad liberal education, plan four is offered. This plan allows students to major in art while minoring in a cognate area such as interior design, advertising, marketing, photography, landscape design or art therapy.

Department Stresses the Practical

In the Department of Communications students interested in a career in communications may gain on-the-job experience by working at one of SFA's broadcasting facilities or publications.

Qualified students have an opportunity to work at KSAU (radio station), SFA TV-2 (television station), the Stone Fort (yearbook) or the Pine Log (the student newspaper).

The communication internship also offers students a chance to gain experience by working off campus in a communications-related job. Students gain academic credit while doing this.

Communication majors are offered a choice of a bachelor of arts or a bachelor of science degree.

Communication studies may be concentrated in one of four areas. The first is broadfield communications in which students are introduced to the whole field of communications.

The second area, speech communication, reflects different situations in which speech is found in human relations. Special attention is given to methodological procedures for examining the speech communication processes.

Journalism introduces students to the basic courses of news gathering and writing, editing and photography. After taking these courses, students may branch into more specialized areas of study.

Radio-Television is designed to prepare the student for a professional career in broadcasting. Students are offered courses in both creativity and theory.

Music Majors Participate in Ensembles

The Department of Music prepares students for careers in music as teachers or performers. The department stresses a broad background in liberal arts.

Students interested in majoring in music must present evidence of talent and experience in music. All entering freshmen are required to take a theory test so that they can be placed in the appropriate section. All entering music majors are required to audition.

Students who wish to have music as their minor may choose from two plans. The first plan is designed to accommodate the elementary education major, and the second plan is for students other than elementary education majors. All majors and minors are required to audition.

Music majors must participate in a major ensemble such as band, choir, or orchestra during each semester.

Small ensembles are also available including brass choir, woodwind ensemble, percussion ensemble, chamber singers, opera workshop, lab band and other groups.

Throughout the year recitals are presented by students and faculty members. The recitals are open to the public.

Each year the Department of Music and the School of Fine Arts sponsor various recitals, concerts and seminars. Students are required to attend a specific number of recitals.

Students may earn up to six hours credit in advanced placement music theory.

Renovation of the Griffith Fine Arts Building began in January. Completion is expected in January of '85.

SFA Theatre Department Encourages Creativity

The Department of Theatre wishes to foster and encourage creativity in students. Students wishing to pursue careers in theatre and related fields receive their training here.

The department also provides experiences for the students that will help them in public relations.

The Department of Theatre serves a larger function in that it has a responsibility to the University and the community.

The Department of Theatre at SFA is a member of the Texas Educational Theatre Association and the National Association of Schools of Theatre.

The department offers advance placement for all courses currently offered.

Dean Helps School Achieve Its Potential

Dr. Kent T. Adair, dean of the School of Forestry, believes that "the strength of the school is that it is not departmentalized; yet it has 20 faculty with diverse interests The fact that it is not departmentalized facilitates an interdisciplinary approach to natural resources management."

"At the graduate level," Dean Adair said, "we draw interest based on two things—the reputation of the faculty, the participation of faculty in international activities and the fact that we offer the kind of education that is in demand in certain foreign countries."

Dean Adair said that foreign students in forestry at SFA are often in managerial positions in their home countries and come here for advanced training. "We recruit internationally," he said, "but are very selective of those who come."

Students come from as far away as Nicaragua, Gambia and Africa to study forestry at SFA.

Dean Adair said that he thinks the undergraduate program represents the best general education a person can get in this day and age because it is composed of both science and general education subjects.

"The most challenging part of my job is to try to make the school achieve its potential," Dean Adair said.

Doctoral Programs Available in Forestry

The School of Forestry at SFA is accredited by the Society of American Foresters.

The objective of the school is to provide a professional education that will enable graduates to manage forest land for the maximum return of forest products and for the preservation or enhancement of watershed, soil, range, wildlife and recreation resources.

To pursue these objectives, the faculty of the school and especially the Office of the Dean counsel and guide students in academic and professional matters. In addition, the school conducts research contributing to the solution of problems concerning forest lands and their correct multiple-use management.

The school offers comprehensive programs in forestry for which the bachelor of science in forestry is earned and in environmental science for which the bachelor of science degree is earned.

All students pursuing a degree in forestry are required to attend one session of the Forestry Field Station. The station is located just north of Milam, Texas, on a forested hill above the U.S.F.S. Red Hills Lake Recreation Area. During a session, students participate with faculty in an integrated sequence of six courses for a total of eight semester hours of credit. Students attend the field station during the summer between their junior and senior year. Students in the environmental science degree program are not required to attend the field station.

Certification as a professional wildlife biologist by the Wildlife Society is a voluntary program for individual students. It is the responsibility of the student, working closely with his/her adviser, to take the appropriate courses as required by the Wildlife Society.

The School of Forestry offers master's degree programs for students with bachelor's degrees in forestry; for students with bachelor's degrees in a field other than forestry but who wish to become practicing foresters; for students in a field other than forestry but who wish to pursue studies in a specialized branch of forestry.

In cooperation with the School of Business, the school also offers a non-thesis, 38-credit-hour program leading to a master's of science in forestry with a forestry-business emphasis.

A doctorate of forestry is available in the school. This degree is designed to provide a broad education in forestry at the graduate level. A dissertation is required.

A cooperative Ph.D program is also available which allows students to take half of their course work at SFA and half at Texas A&M. Dissertations are researched and written at SFA.

Dean of the School of Forestry is Dr. Kent T. Adair.

Dean Helps Students Over Rough Spots

"My favorite part of my job is helping students grow up and mature—get over the rough spots," Dr. James V. Reese, dean of the School of Liberal Arts, said.

Reese said that the school was blessed with a very fine faculty, one that is well trained and interested in students.

Dean Reese came to SFA in 1977 after sixteen years at Texas Tech. While at Texas Tech, he was associate dean of the graduate school for three years.

He said we need to do more to help the faculty at SFA—both in their teaching and in their scholarly work.

"We need to improve academic advising. We advise undecided students on campus. I think we need to provide more training for faculty as advisers and provide ways for them to keep up with changes in degree requirements," Dean Reese said.

Department of English and Philosophy

The School of Liberal Arts comprises six departments: English, history, language, political science and geography, psychology and sociology.

The Department of English and Philosophy does not offer advance placement by examination, but qualified students may earn advance placement credit as a result of performance in one of the freshman courses: English 133, English 234 and English 235.

The department, through its English courses, tries to teach students effective, appropriate use of English. Courses are designed to present the literary aspects of English.

English is essential for all students. Courses are offered to meet the needs of students who have particular interest on both the graduate and undergraduate levels.

Although philosophy courses were once regarded as necessary for the general education for would-be-teachers, philosophy now serves to provide intellectual stimulation for students planning careers in other professional and vocational fields besides teaching.

The department also offers a minor in writing in cooperation with other departments. The program prepares students to communicate clearly and logically in writing.

The National English Honor Society (Sigma Tau Delta) offers membership to English majors or minors who have completed six hours of English literature (not including the freshman English requirement). The student must also have a 3.0 GPA in English and an overall GPA of 3.0. Associate memberships are available to qualified non-English majors and minors. If a student cannot meet these qualifications, an auxiliary membership is offered.

The Department of History hopes to teach each student to appreciate his own national heritage and to understand the development and problems of other cultures as well.

The department believes that a person must be familiar with his roots to be sensitive to the future.

The department offers a program that will allow students to enter a variety of career fields. People in all careers will find that a knowledge of history is helpful.

History has a close relationship with the arts and sciences, business, politics, law, diplomacy, the church, the library, museum work and teaching.

Modern Languages

The Department of Modern Languages has three objectives: to teach students to speak, read and write modern languages; to cultivate appreciation for the people whose language is being studied; and to provide the student with counseling to prepare him for the various opportunities in language work.

The department offers an advanced placement program to students with exceptional backgrounds or abilities. At the beginning of each semester and during summer freshman orientation sessions, beginning students are offered an optional placement examination in French, German and Spanish. This examination helps the department place students in the proper courses.

The department offers students majoring in French, German or Spanish or other liberal arts majors with sufficient advanced hours in these subjects a chance to participate in the Departmental Honors Study.

Political Science

Many opportunities are available today for the ambitious political science student. The largest employer in the United States is the government. It is also the largest business.

An undergraduate degree in political science can prepare the student for almost endless variety of opportunities in diplomatic, civil and military service careers, law school, journalism and other careers in public life. A student may also get a teaching degree as a secondary social studies teacher. Executive positions in the United States and abroad may also be available to the political science major.

In 1930 and 1937 the state legislature enacted laws requiring the study of United States and Texas governments by all students who receive degrees from state-supported colleges and universities in Texas.

The department offers a non-technical sequence of courses which is open to all students.

Geography courses seek to define and study the patterns of physical and human features of the earth.

The department believes it is necessary that informed citizens have an idea of the nature, the cause and the meanings of variations in earth and human resources.

Geography courses are also offered to show the connections and movements between places and the meaning to man of the likenesses and differences among places on earth.

Department of Sociology

Sociology studies human relationships in a scientific way. The Department of Sociology tries to provide the student with a general understanding of sociology, anthropology and gerontology. The department provides preprofessional training in such areas as medicine, nursing, social work, law and ministry. Students are prepared to provide professional and educational services for the community. They are also prepared for graduate studies in sociology and gerontology.

Students with a B.A. in sociology should be prepared to function in such occupations as community planner, social worker, probation officer, leisure counselor, personnel manager, healthcare planner, coordinator of aging services, and administrator.

Alpha Kappa Delta (the National Honor Society for sociology students) offers membership to undergraduate and graduate sociology majors and minors who have completed at least 10 semester hours of sociology. The student must rank in the upper 35 per cent of his class and have a B average in sociology.

Department of Psychology

The Department of Psychology tries to provide students with an understanding of human behavior. The student is also taught how to apply this knowledge in the many different professional areas in psychology. Students prepare to work in such career fields as experimental, clinical and community psychology. They are also prepared for paraprofessional work in industrial research, in clinical or community mental health programs and in interdisciplinary fields in the social or medical sciences. The department also offers a teaching certificate.

Dean Has Modernization Goal

"My biggest goal is learning my job. I'm learning every day," Dr. Harry P. Hoge, dean of the School of Science and Mathematics, said. "The only serious problem I've found is that there is no text book on how to be a dean. I think it just takes time to learn what is expected of you."

Dean Hoge came to SFA in 1979 as a member of the geology department. He replaced Dean Glen T. Clayton in August of 1983.

Speaking of his initial goals, Dean Hoge said that the science equipment across the department is old and worn. "We have a major modernization goal. We also want to computerize the school." He also wants to see the master's degree in nursing developed.

"I like it (Texas) very much. I spent a lot of my time in New Mexico and, as a matter of fact, I got one of my degrees there. I love the climate here; I'm glad to be out of the cold and snow," Dean Hoge said.

Department of Physics

The School of Math and Science comprises six departments: physics, chemistry, biology, geology, mathematics and statistics and nursing.

The Department of Physics tries to acquaint students with the general principles which are the foundations of the understanding of physics. Students are furnished experiences in lecture and laboratory which will help them develop scientific attitudes.

The department tries to prepare students for graduate work or give students the skills needed to teach at a precollege level. Students are also provided with the physics background necessary for work in engineering, related sciences and medicine.

Department of Chemistry

The Department of Chemistry hopes to prepare students for positions in industry, government service and teaching. The department also offers courses to which non-chemistry science majors can relate. Non-science students are acquainted with the methods, concepts and achievements of the science of chemistry.

The Department of Chemistry is approved by the American Chemical Society for the training of professional chemists.

School Supports Graduate Students

The Graduate School is responsible for all graduate programs at SFA. Faculty members of the school are also faculty members of other schools. Dr. Glen T. Clayton is dean of the Graduate School.

The school is working on a master's degree program in nursing. The school feels that support of graduate students is very important.

Clayton received a bachelor's and master's degree from the University of Arkansas and his doctorate from the University of Missouri. He has taught at William Jewell College in Missouri, at the University of Missouri, the University of Arkansas and SFA.

Dean Clayton was Dean of the School of Sciences and Mathematics at SFA for 11 years before becoming the dean of the graduate school.

He did research work for Argonne National Laboratory involving X-ray diffraction, the study of liquids.

In his spare time, Dean Clayton enjoys collegiate athletics, particularly basketball, and is active in church.

Department of Biology

The Department of Biology tries to familiarize students with the scientific methods and biological facts that are needed in the modern world. The department is designed for the student seeking a career in biology; yet it offers basic training for students who have chosen to major in another area.

A graduate program is offered for students who plan to work toward a master's degree.

Geology Benefits Non-science Majors

The Department of Geology is designed to give science and non-science majors an understanding of scientific methods. The department also hopes to give prospective science students the fundamentals of geology as a foundation for other science studies.

The department offers two programs of study, the General Curriculum and the Professional Curriculum. The general program provides a broad cultural background and prepares the student for employment closely related to geology or to a job where a scientific background is required. The professional program is designed for students interested in doing graduate work in geology and in seeking employment as a geologist.

Geology majors with superior records may qualify for Honors in Geology.

Department Offers Sound Curriculum

The Department of Mathematics and Statistics has two goals: to provide a good curriculum to students interested in mathematics or statistics as a career and to serve students who have other majors.

The department offers a Master of Science in Mathematics, a Master of Science in Statistics and a Master of Science in Mathematics Teaching.

Students Gain Experience

The Division of Nursing tries to provide students with a knowledge of the art and science of nursing. The division gives students the theoretical base for the practice of nursing. Students are prepared for any advanced nursing education they wish to pursue. Students are also prepared to function in both current and future roles in nursing. Students are encouraged to gain experience in other academic areas such as the behavioral sciences, physical sciences and humanities.

The nursing program allows Registered Nurses to continue their educations and receive the Bachelor of Science in Nursing. The student must meet the programs requirements and be eligible for a license in Texas as an RN.

Music Brings Students Together

Considering the high cost of living these days, it is not too hard to understand why students hold down part time jobs in addition to their school work. The two students in the pictures you see are no different. Jim Cleveland and Jeff Prince are the young men who comprise The Cleveland-Prince Band.

For the past two years Jim and Jeff have been picking out country tunes in order to put themselves through college. While it is not unusual for college kids to play a few songs on the guitar, it is uncommon for them to make a living from it. Jeff, a journalism major from Arlington, insists that it isn't so much their talent that opened the door for them to perform in local restaurants. The main reason is that they already owned all the equipment necessary to work in nightclubs.

"There are a lot of talented entertainers at SFA, says Prince, "but none of them have the $1,500 it takes to get started." Fifteen-hundred dollars is about how much a public address system costs.

Neither knew the other until they both lived in dorm 14 in 1979-1980.

"I was playing the guitar late one night, and Jeff came strolling in uninvited with his guitar over his shoulder. He said he heard guitar music and thought he would sit in for a while. I think he couldn't find his room," Cleveland, a recently graduated business major from Fort Worth, said.

That night spent singing and playing the guitars was the first of many. After two years of playing together at parties and in the dorm rooms, both Cleveland and Prince decided to save their money and buy a P.A. system. Once the system was bought, it was just a matter of getting their act together and then trying to sell it to clubs and restaurants.

Prince said, "Jim and I are at an advantage over some other bands because we work so cheap. When we first started out, we'd play for peanuts. I remember one job we had was in Dennison. We drove 250 miles there, played until 1 a.m. and drove 250 miles back. I think we got paid about $100. After gas and food expenses we probably cleared about $20 a piece, but, hey, we were getting paid."

Both are former employees of Rossini's restaurant. They say that's where they got polished. They have been playing at the Wurst Haus, a German restaurant in Lufkin, for about a year. Prince said that performing there has helped them get other jobs, like playing for private parties and businesses.

Prince went on the road in the summer with 10-year music veteran, J.W. Kline. They traveled to Michigan, Chicago and Nashville. The band, Roadrunner, made its first stop at a Chicago disco called the Close Encounters Club.

Even though the boys love their work, both admit it has its drawbacks. Cleveland says, "Going to school and playing bars doesn't always mix too well. When you get booked for two weeks from eight to midnight and have to go to class in the morning, not to mention studying, well it can drag you down sometimes."

Prince says, "It's not so much the hours as it is the atmosphere. Everybody around you is having a good time, and they all want the band to have a good time. Sometimes it's hard not to give in to temptation."

Neither one is complaining though. Both think that entertaining is wonderful.

Cleveland says, "Playing music, having people enjoy themselves by applauding, and even buying you a beer now and then, not to mention getting paid good money to do it—well, it's a tough job, but someone has to do it."

In spite of their success in playing music, they have slowed down for the moment. Cleveland has finished his education, receiving a bachelor's degree in business administration, and was recently married. He is in the process of finding more stable work with the help of his degree.

Prince is also busy these days. He is associate editor of The Pine Log, the school newspaper. Prince plans on graduating in December, so the future of the Cleveland-Prince Band is up in air.

Talking about his future in music, Prince says, "There is nothing I would like better than to be a professional musician. When I say professional I mean that I not only want to support myself playing the guitar, but also to progress in my music and to climb the ladder of success that is the aim of all entertainers. After I graduate, I plan on devoting my time to this goal. I love my music, and hope to make it my life, but if nothing else becomes of my music career I will still consider it a success in that it helped me obtain my education."

Cleveland said, "I'm not sure if I'll ever play another note of professional music. I know the demands it puts on oneself, not to mention a wife and a family. I do know, however, that I will always be grateful to music for giving me the chance to make friends and experience feelings I never would have experienced without my guitar and the desire to play it."

Jim Cleveland and Jeff Prince may not be the next Waylon Jennings and Willie Nelson, but then again, they just might.

Darryl Adams, Houston sophomore, came to SFA because of the photography program.

He started shooting pictures as a sophomore in high school. Since then he has entered several photography contests. His most recent honor was advancing to the semifinals in the photography Forum Contest. Out of 55,000 entries, he placed in the top eight percent.

Darryl worked in South America where he shot photographs for an engineering company. "I worked there for two years. I shot stills and worked on the X-ray crew."

After graduation, Darryl plans to work in the commercial photography field. He eventually wants to open a photography business.

When asked what he likes most about SFA, Darryl replied, "the campus beauty: it cheers you up when your day is going bad."

"If I can prevent one serious injury from happening, then I think I'm successful," Kevin Jones, Van senior, said.

Jones is a health and physical education major, and is a trainer for the Lumberjacks.

In football season, he spent three hours before each game preparing athletes for the game.

He enjoys being a trainer, and plans to pursue this field as a career. Jones is working on his secondary teaching certificate.

Jones said, "I hate to see an injury due to neglect, and nothing done about it." He stressed that he hoped to prevent needless injuries due to neglect.

"I would someday like to become a prominent record producer," said Tim Pynes, Lampasas sophomore. "I would also like to return to Central America, but this time to give instead of receive. I truly know how fortunate we are as Americans to be able to go to bed at night without feeling hungry," he said.

Pynes has lived in many parts of the world because his father is in Army Intelligence and his mother is an opera singer. The family's longest residence has been in the Central American countries.

Pynes wants to major in record industry management. He plans to finish school at Middle Tennessee State University in Murfreesboro, Tennessee.

In reference to SFA, Pynes said, "The two years I've been here have helped me decide what I want to do with my life. I've made a lot of good friends, and I'm going to regret leaving SFA."

Daryl Brown, Vidor junior, practices a unique craft—taxidermy. "I was interested and fascinated by it (taxidermy), so I just took a course through the mail and taught myself how to do it. I didn't start doing work for other people until I was pretty sure of myself," Brown said. He has been practicing taxidermy as a hobby for about two and a half years.

Brown mounts all animals except fish, which he plans on doing eventually. Brown said mounting fish involves special, costly equipment. "I get most of my business from mounting deer heads and ducks," Brown said.

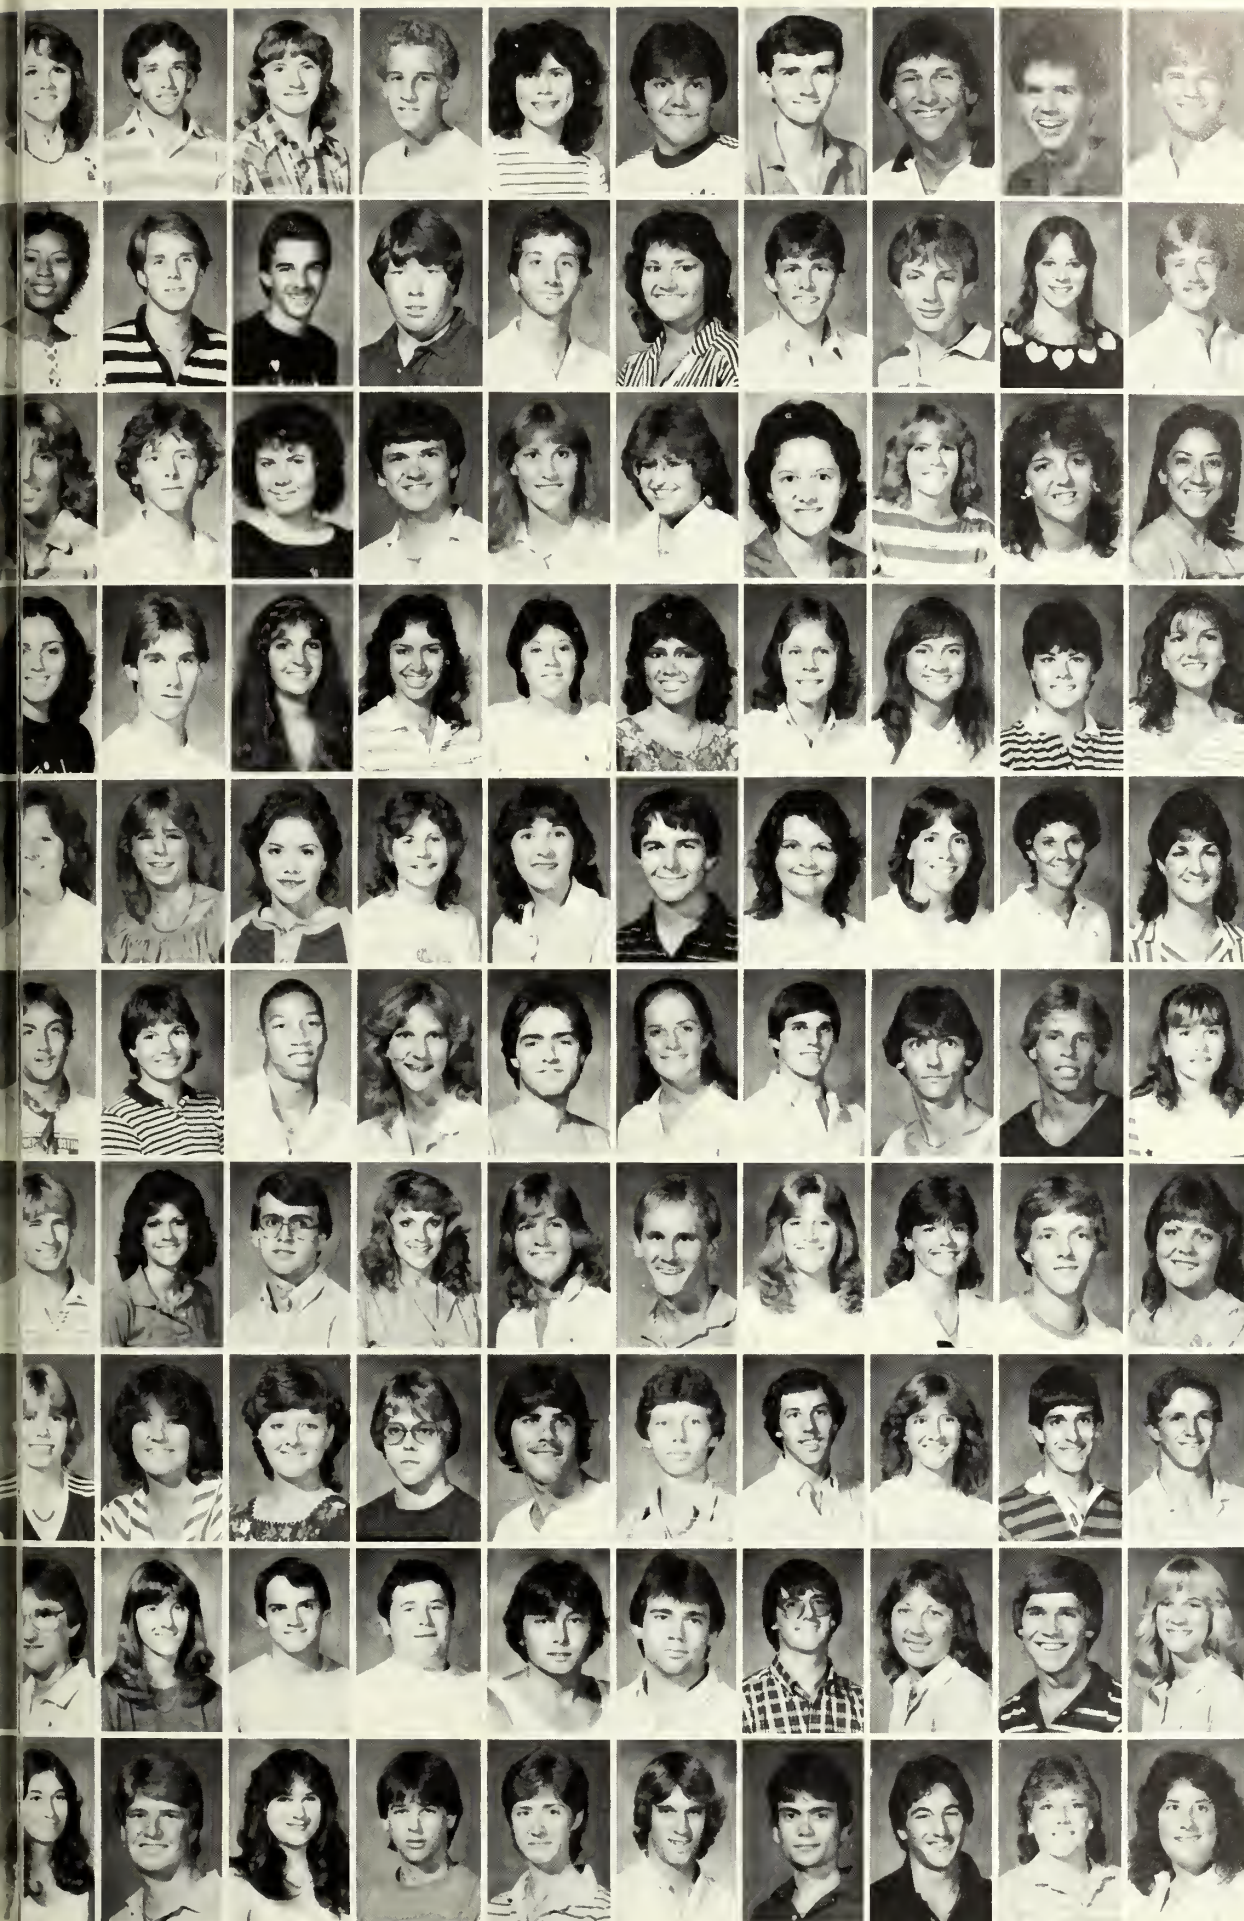

Brown said the most difficult animal he ever worked on is a bobcat. "There's just a lot to it. You've got to get their feet, claws, eyes and ears—there's just a lot to work on."

The price varies according to size and pose, with a bird costing anywhere from $80 to $100; a deer head, $125 to $175 and a fox, $250 to $300. "I like doing it, mostly for the money," Brown said.

He also displays mounted quail in terrariums, which are big sellers at Christmas. They cost him about $10 and six hours to make, and he sells them for $100.

Ben Watts, Nacogdoches senior, has played for two professional teams. He recently signed a one-year contract to play for a third team.

In 1978 Watts tried out for the lumberjacks as a walk-on and made the team. The Jacks put him at defensive end. He played the position for four seasons.

In 1982 Watts tried out for the Houston Oilers as a free agent. He was selected for the team.

Watts played a few pre-season games as noseguard for the Oilers before he was cut from the team.

The New Jersey Generals of the United States Football League picked up his contract a month later. Watts played his first televised game with the Generals.

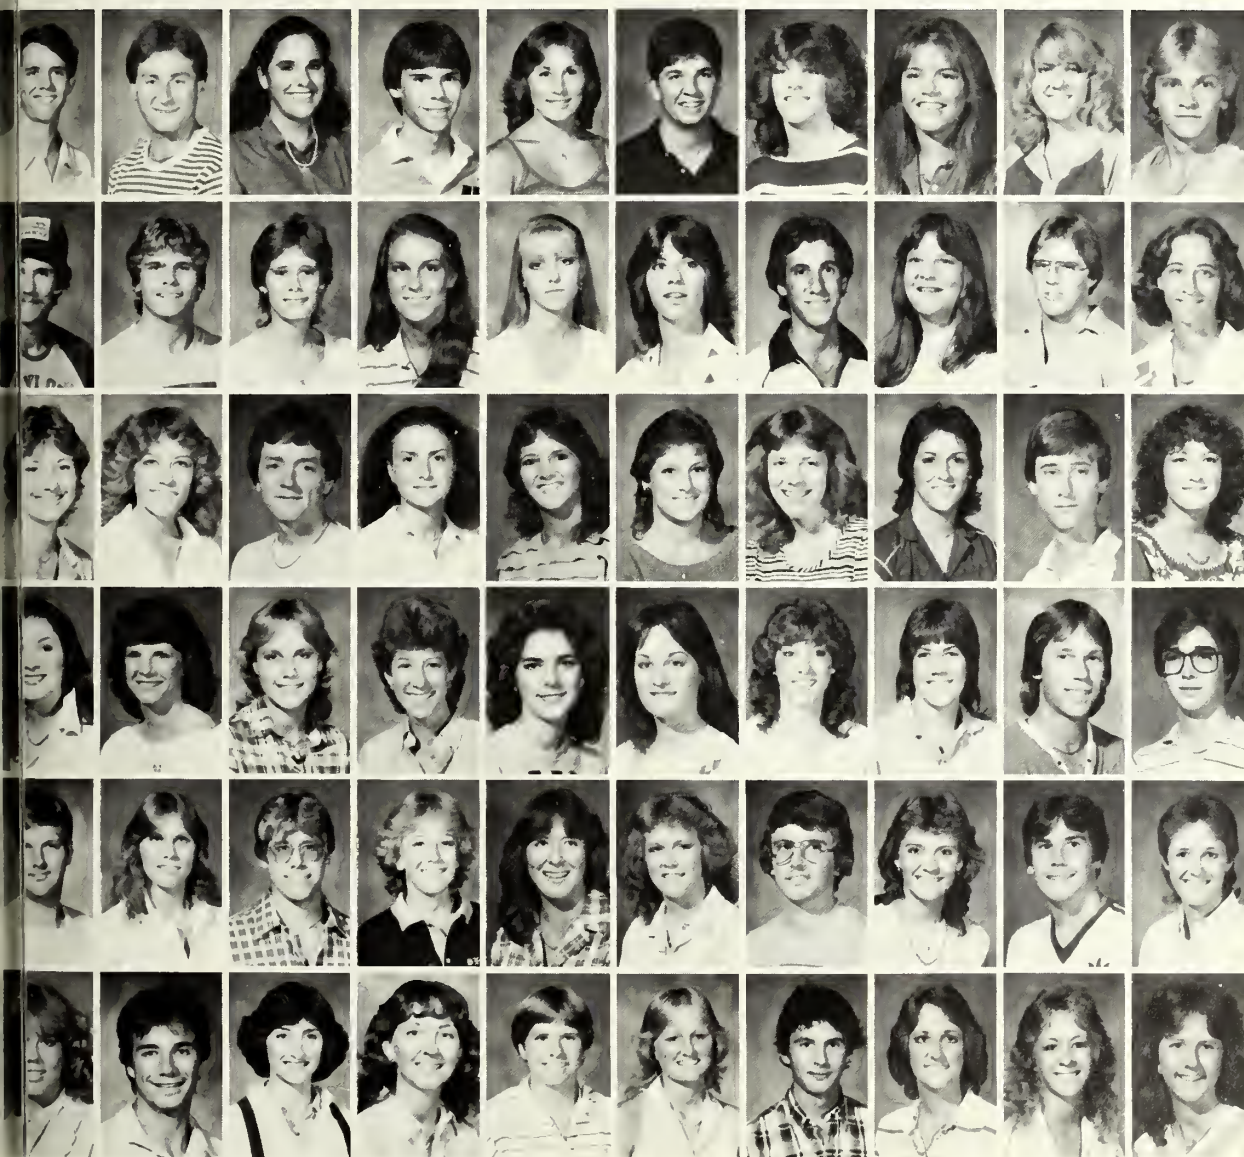

After half of the season was over, Watts was cut from the team.

Watts then hired a personal agent who arranged a one-year contract with the Pittsburgh Maulers, a USFL team.

The Maulers started training camp in January. Watts is now an assistant defensive coach for the Jacks.

"Football in college was fun," said Watts. "But in the pros, it's all business."

"I never dreamed that one day I would play ball on the same team as Earl Campbell and Herschel Walker," Watts said. "That was a dream come true."

Pam Clay, Houston sophomore, came to SFA on a softball scholarship to pitch for the talented Ladyjack team.

"I like Nacogdoches because it's a small and nice place, and the softball athletic program is growing," Clay said.

Clay is majoring in physical education, with an emphasis in special education. She has a full schedule with classes and practices. "We (the softball team) miss a lot of school, and you can get bogged down," Clay said.

"You still have to do all the work other students do—teachers don't give us a break. They tend to make it harder on the athletes because they expect more out of us," Clay said.

Clay hopes to obtain a drafting degree and to be a pitching coach for a college team.

The natural beauty of the campus is what brought Mary McLaurin, Houston junior, to SFA. The computer science major never had visions of terminals and programs. She began her college career as a forestry major. "Computer Science was a requirement of my forestry major. I liked it and decided to major in it after taking several classes."

McLaurin found computer science challenging, rewarding and creative.

When asked what kind of an influence computers will have on our society, she replied, "I think everyone will have to deal with computers in their personal and business life. I don't think everyone will need to know how to program, but it would help if they knew what was going on inside the computer."

She felt students should have to take at least three hours of computer science. If it's required, then a wider variety of introductory classes should be offered to enable courses to benefit the student.

"The computer science department is respected throughout Texas, and to receive a degree from SFA is a definite advantage," McLaurin said.

Susan Perry, Little Cypress senior, plans to combine her hobbies—sewing and quilting—with her areas of study—marketing and fashion merchandising—to open her own business upon graduation. She wants to sell her own designs in clothing and other merchandise.

A bedspread and wall hanging are samples of her original designs.

"My time at SFA has been very meaningful," Perry says. "It has helped me to mature greatly as a whole person."

"I play for the activity and the love of the game basically," Naveen Jaggi, Clear Lake senior, said.

Jaggi plays the position of right fullback for the SFA soccer club and has been playing the game for 10 years. "I started in fifth grade playing little league community soccer," the finance major said.

Jaggi had spent several years living in India where he gained an interest in the sport. "When I was in India, I became interested in the game basically because they play a lot of soccer there."

The sport is not without its injuries. Jaggi suffered a broken ankle and lacerations to his head as a result of a collision with a fellow player earlier in the year.

Jaggi doesn't seem to mind the hardships of the game. He said he was looking forward to playing on amateur adult teams in Houston after graduation. "I'm gonna play until my body can't take it anymore," Jaggi said.

Dawn Eatherly, Fort Worth sophomore, decided to attend SFA because she liked the small town atmosphere. "The town is kind of laid back and the atmosphere is very friendly."

Eatherly is a vocational home economics major. When asked what she felt about the home economics department, she replied, "I like it because it's very personalized. The teachers take the time to get to know each student."

If I had a problem, I know I could go to one of my teachers.

A major misconception," Eatherly said, "is that people think you don't need to go to school to learn about home economics. That's not true; it is a professional career, and, like any other career, it has to be learned."

Barry Oliver, Nacogdoches senior, started school at SFA in the fall of 1979 after leaving the Air Force because of a hand injury. He will graduate this December with a degree in marketing, but his real love lies in the field of photography which he will be studying in graduate school this spring. He was first exposed to photography in the Air Force where he photographed sky divers from a plane. He said, "I really found out that photography was for me after my first shot in Photography 201."

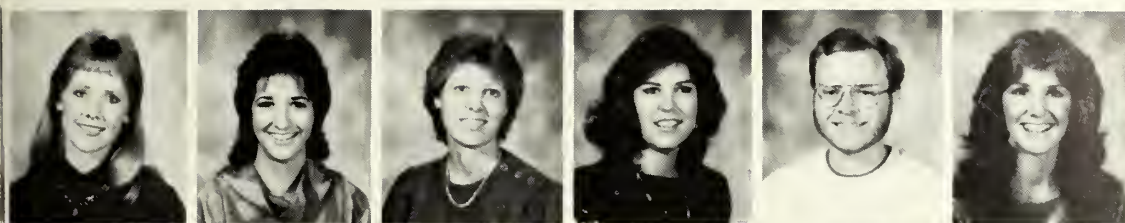

Barry is mainly interested in fashion photography, and places a lot of emphasis on dealing with people. He plans to be a fashion assistant for a Dallas photographer after he finishes graduate school, and eventually plans to do his own fashion work.

At SFA, Barry teaches the 303 and 305 photography labs. He says he enjoys giving encouragement and that he learns more by teaching. He can be found either working at Eckerd's Drugs or in his darkroom where he spends the majority of his time. Barry spends 16 hours a day at school and commented, "You need to take total advantage of the knowledge that is here."

Robert Crawford, Lake Jackson senior, has been singing and touring since the tenth grade.

Crawford has toured in England, Holland, South Africa and the United States. For a year and a half, he had a singing contract with a Minneapolis Christian television station.

An album of contemporary Christian music now being produced in Houston will be released in January, 1984.

Crawford is majoring in the humanities because, he says, "This degree is very broad and allows me a chance to receive a large educational background."

After graduation, Crawford plans to go into sales or something office related to support a part-time singing career.

The Butterfly Man hosted the Gong Show at SFA. The show was sponsored by the UC Programs Special Events Committee.

'Mom, I'll Never Be a Teacher!'

"My mom was a teacher and I used to come home and say 'Mom, I'll never be a teacher!'" said Karen Arnold, Lake Jackson junior. "Now I would like any kind of job in the classroom. I just want to work with special children, probably deaf children. I think that would be a real special job to have."

Arnold came to SFA one week after graduating from high school. "I think my mom was afraid that if I didn't go then, I wasn't going to go at all. I wasn't motivated, and I didn't know what I wanted to do with my life. But there comes a time when you realize that if you're going to make anything of yourself, you better get with it."

Arnold is working on a triple major in elementary education, deaf and severely hard of hearing education and generic special education. She works 20 hours a week in the library and babysits for at least 12 hours a week. She carries a class load of 12 to 16 hours and attends school all year long. She is married to graduate assistant Ray Arnold.

Arnold met her husband at a popular night spot, Snoopy's, during her freshman year. At first they were just friends, but they eventually started dating.

"Ray's helped me all along. If it wasn't for him I don't know if I would have made it this far," Arnold said. "It really helps out a lot when your husband is supportive. There's been a lot of times when I didn't want to go to school, and he made me realize how important it was."

Since neither of them is on scholarship or financial aid, they both do odd jobs outside of their regular jobs. Ray, whose degree is in aquatic biology, takes tickets at SFA football games, and Karen babysits.

"We babysit together sometimes. It's the only time we can spend together sometimes."

"Deaf ed. is fascinating to me. I want so much to help," said Arnold. "Deaf kids who just can't communicate."

Arnold knew that she wanted to do something in either deaf education or generic special education, but did not realize she had so many hours until the 1983 fall semester.

"I didn't know I'd have three majors. Some people said, 'You can't do this.' I didn't know I was trying to do anything so unusual."

School Supports Graduate Students

The Graduate School is responsible for all graduate programs at SFA. Faculty members of the school are also faculty members of other schools. Dr. Glen T. Clayton is dean of the Graduate School.

The school is working on a master's degree program in nursing. The school feels that support of graduate students is very important.

Clayton received a bachelor's and master's degree from the University of Arkansas and his doctorate from the University of Missouri. He has taught at William Jewell College in Missouri, at the University of Missouri, the University of Arkansas and SFA.

Dean Clayton was Dean of the School of Sciences and Mathematics at SFA for 11 years before becoming the dean of the graduate school.

He did research work for Argonne National Laboratory involving X-ray diffraction, the study of liquids.

In his spare time, Dean Clayton enjoys collegiate athletics, particularly basketball, and is active in church.

Students Attracted by Campus Beauty

By Michelle Dewitt

Imagine sunny afternoons under towering pines as you gaze at rainbow-colored flower beds. Imagine romantic strolls with friends along shaded pathways.

You've been imagining the most beautiful campus in Texas—Stephen F. Austin State University.

Considering all of the beauty, it's no wonder that more people than ever are choosing to enroll here.

"To be honest," Lesa Cowart, Houston sophomore, said, "I chose SFA because it was so gorgeous. I knew I'd feel right at home here."

SFA officials realize that beauty is one of its major appeals to potential students. A lot of time and energy is devoted to maintaining the school's physical appearance and over-all public image.

"There are more than 20 employees working full time to keep the campus pretty," Robert N. Rogers, manager of grounds, said. "This doesn't even include the 20 to 25 students we've hired part time. We do all the design, landscaping and installations ourselves."

Rogers and his staff's responsibilities are diversified. They maintain everything from vegetative areas to the outdoor athletic complexes.

Rogers, who has been in the horticulture profession for 17 years, has set three goals for his staff. His first goal is to significantly improve the turf on campus.

"I'd like the grass to be a healthy, lush green," Rogers said. "We want to discourage students from walking across it by creating blockage. They will feel obliged to walk around."

"My second goal is to accommodate the landscape to the students' needs. We've been watching the traffic patterns before we pour the sidewalks and install the sprinkler systems."

The third goal is to win a beautification award for SFA. Rogers hopes to compete in the national category of college campuses.

Many appreciative students believe SFA is a definite winner in this category.

"I love to spend free time riding my bike around campus," Vickie Seidl, Houston senior, said. "Before I graduate, I'm going to take lots of pictures so I can show everybody how spectacular it (the campus) is."

"SFA is totally opposite from the palm trees and flat land I left behind in Harlingen," senior Shawn Swanson said. "The change is so refreshing!"

Rodney Stephens, Houston graduate student, simply states that the campus beauty lends itself to SFA's reputation of tall women and virgin pines.

"Students can expect some astonishing changes in about three years," Rogers said. "I have a feeling everyone is going to be surprised at how truly beautiful this campus will be."

"KSAU Belongs to the Students of SFA"

By Tanya Cunningham

"I'm motivated by God," Terry Caywood, manager of KSAU said. "I feel lucky that I have this position, but if I had to give somebody credit it wouldn't be myself. It would be the fact that I am a Christian, and that's the reason I want to do my best."

Although Caywood, Palo Pinto junior, was just appointed manager of SFA's radio station this semester, he's already looking toward the future and at how this position will benefit him. When he graduates in May of '85, he plans to go to Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth where he hopes to work with the Southern Baptist Radio and Television Commission. Last year he received his license to preach from Bethel Baptist Church.

In the meantime, he plans to work hard at KSAU FM 90. Right now, he puts in about 40 hours a week at the station, but he says he doesn't mind.

He said, "I'm new at this, and I want to learn how to be a professional. I don't want to look at this job as something light like turning on my own stereo or something. It's not that. I'm supposed to be here at school to be a professional or at least learn how to become one, and that's what I look at this job as. I want to be a professional."

Caywood became interested in the position of radio station manager last semester when Dr. William J. Oliver, associate professor of communications and faculty adviser for KSAU, began talking to him about the possibility of several paid positions on the radio station opening up.

"I was interested because radio-TV is my major," he said. The possibility of getting paid also interested Caywood. He was married in August. Although he has a job as youth director at Shady Grove Baptist Church outside of town, and his wife, Julie, is employed in the social work department at SFA, he says "the extra money won't hurt."

"I never expected to become a station manager one semester after I applied for the job," Caywood said.

Dr. Oliver said that he decided to hire Caywood for several reasons. He said that Caywood seemed like a serious person, he appeared to have the leadership qualities necessary to manage KSAU and he is an excellent student. "But mostly," Dr. Oliver said, "he had a desire. He wanted to do it. He wanted a challenge, and it certainly is that."

Although Caywood has never worked at a radio station before, he did take the audio production class taught by Dr. Oliver. Theory and practice in sound recording for radio, television and film are taught in the class.

Caywood's wife, who graduated from SFA in August with a degree in marketing, said she didn't think the fact that he lacked experience would hinder him. She said, "Terry gives 110 percent in everything he does."

Dr. Oliver seems to agree. He said, "Terry's going to bring a desire to succeed in his job and a lot of enthusiasm which is contagious, and I think he is bringing strong leadership qualities to KSAU. The stronger the leadership, the more beneficial it is to everyone."

Caywood wants KSAU to have a larger student following. At the first of the semester, he appointed a committee to draw up a survey to find out what kind of music SFA students would like to hear on the Nightrock program, which runs Monday through Friday from 8 p.m. until midnight.

He said, "If it was left up to me, I wouldn't play anything but Christian music all the time, but it's not my station. It belongs to the students of SFA."

Caywood said eventually he would like to see KSAU broadcasting 24 hours-a-day, but doesn't know if it will happen while he's still at SFA. "It would take a lot more student volunteers," he said.

For now, KSAU broadcast Monday through Fridays from about 1 p.m. until midnight. Besides Nightrock, some of the other programs include: The Classical Hour, Jazz Time and The Great Ones.

Caywood said he is going to concentrate on making KSAU FM 90 the best that it can possibly be. The station is staffed by volunteers and students in the 319 radio practicum class.

He said, "The staff is learning and so am I. We are learning together. Dr. Oliver is counting on me. I can't let him down."

Woman Fulfilling Goal of Becoming a Nurse

By Tanya Cunningham

Recent statistics show that more than half of all marriages end in divorce. Usually, men already have established careers. Often, though, a divorced woman has to return to school to prepare herself for a reliable career.

"Women need to be prepared. They shouldn't let their careers lapse," Gail Gengler, divorcee, says. "It's a rare situation when a woman stays home all the time."

Gengler, Nacogdoches post-graduate, enrolled in the nursing program at SFA last summer because she wants to have a career that can financially support her two children.

Although being able to support her children is one of her main concerns, Gengler says, "I've wanted to be a nurse since I was seven. It's what I started out to do at college. I guess I just got sidetracked. So, it's a goal that I've always wanted to complete."

Because of finances, Gengler's children live with their father in Michigan. "The hardest thing for me is being away from them," she says. "But it's better for them right now. I call home every weekend and write them letters all the time."

In order to pay tuition, buy books and pay rent, Gengler works full time. She is a nurse's aide at Nacogdoches Medical Center.

"I'm a conscientious student, but I'm not doing as well by my standards as I would like," Gengler said. "Working takes away from my studying."

She is trying to get some financial assistance so that she can reduce her work hours. "Some of the advanced nursing courses require a lot of time," she says.

Gengler says she came to SFA because she has friends in this area, but adds, "The nursing program here is terrific. It's one of the biggest challenges I've experienced."

She finds the nursing professors to be very supportive. "They expect a lot, but they look out for us too. They have an open-door policy. You can talk to them anytime," Gengler says.

She said that often she learns more from the one-on-one consultations with her professors than in a classroom situation.

"The B.S.N. program here is just entry-level nursing. It's just the first step. But when we leave here, we are prepared to go to the master's level," she said.

Gengler has a teaching degree from Central Michigan University. She said, "I just substitute taught (biology) for three years. I never got to teach in my own classroom. I think that was one of the things that changed my attitude about teaching. The interest just isn't there for me."

However, she finds nursing very interesting. "It's a discipline. It's thought provoking. You have to learn to think in an organized way," Gengler says.

"One of the reasons I decided to do this (go back to school) is because I want divorced women to know they have options, and it's possible to do," Gengler says. "Also, women in general need to have marketable skills."

Students Take Clowning Seriously

By Beth Choate

The tall young man stands by the street with his pants leg rolled up. He holds a sign, while passing motorists turn to stare at the odd spectacle.

No, he is not being initiated into a club. He was stationed there by Mike Snyder, a clown. The man who held the sign is Lester Ruth, minister at Perritte Memorial United Methodist Church and the Wesley Foundation.

Ruth's clowning at a Wesley Foundation watermelon party last fall caught Jerome Brimage's eye. Brimage, Ruth and Snyder started talking about starting a clown troupe on campus.

At first, we just threw the idea around," Brimage says.

But then a real interest developed, and they got serious about clowning. They called a meeting for anyone who would be interested in getting involved with a clown troupe, and now they meet regularly at 3 p.m. on Thursdays at the Wesley Foundation.

Brimage had not been involved with a clowning group before, so one thing he lacked was the all-important costume. He says that some people in the group borrowed costumes, while others made their own. Brimage had no problem getting his gear.

"Mine was from projects in homemaking that turned out looking like a clown suit," he says.

His outfit started out as a jogging suit. He wears a maroon jacket, a striped shirt and bright blue pants. As for his make-up, he says he just experimented one day and discovered a face he liked.

Dressed in his costume, his face painted with a large teardrop under one eye and an ear-to-ear smile, he is ready to clown around. The clowns have visited a nursing home, gone to the Pineywoods Fair and romped at a Lumberjack basketball game. Brimage says he enjoyed the fair the most.

"It was the biggest thing we've done," he said. "Everyone was new (at clowning), but everything kinda fell into place."

He said small children are sometimes afraid of the clowns, but if a clown plays with a child long enough he can usually make friends with the child. He thinks the greatest reward of clowning is seeing people smile.

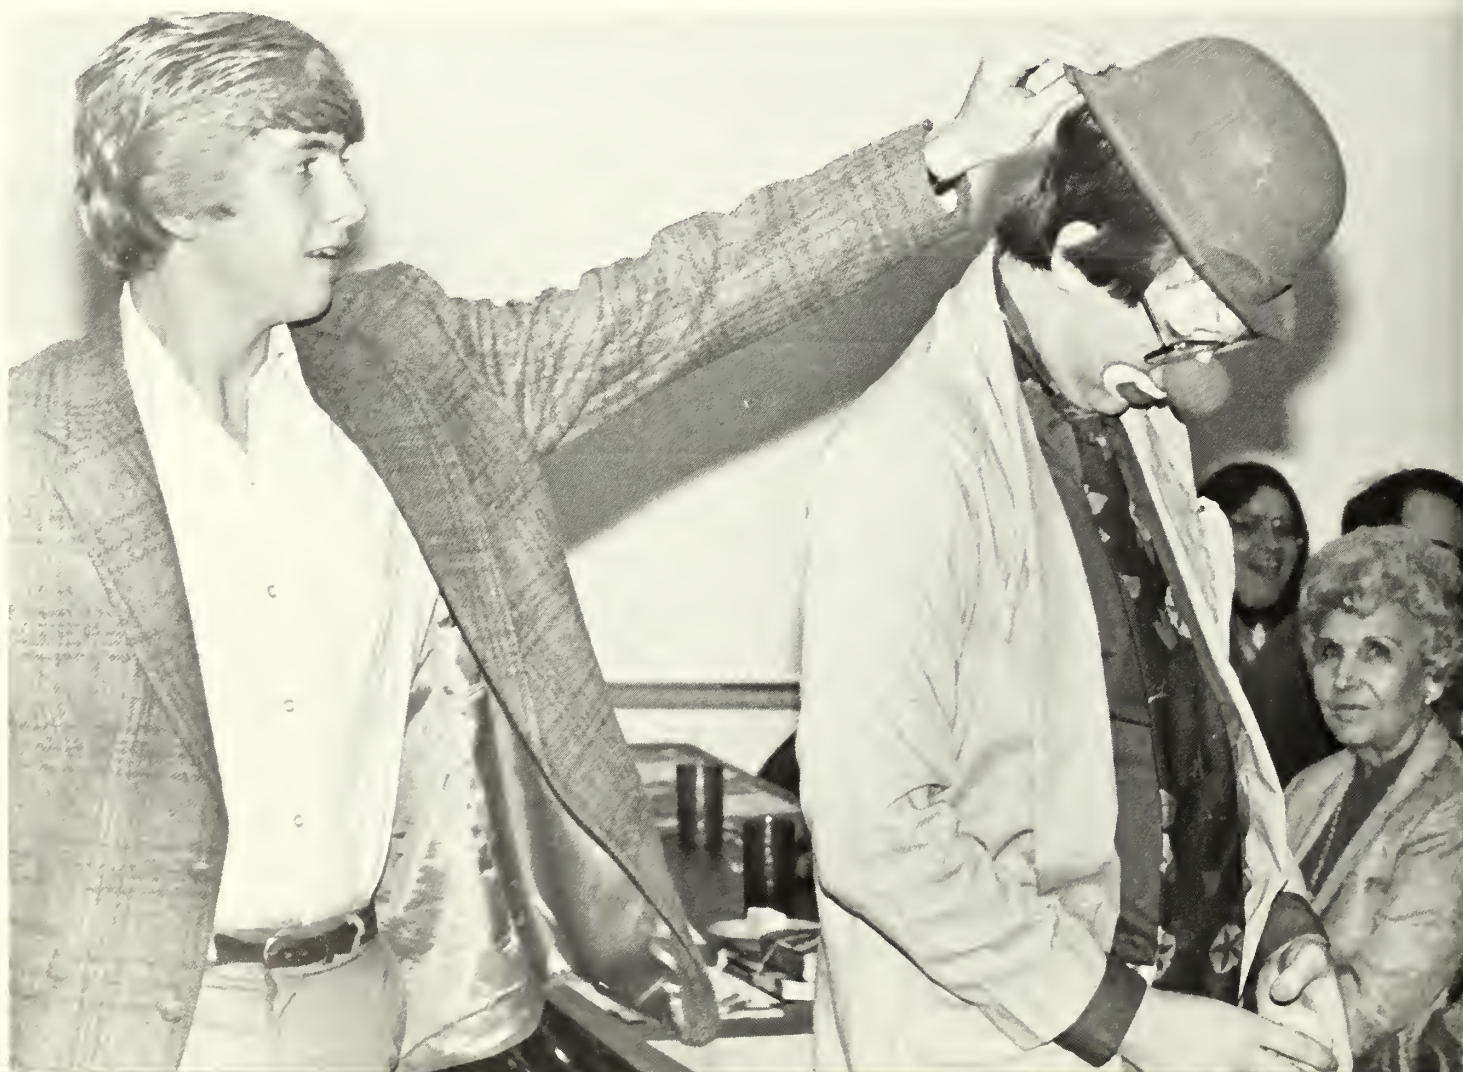

"People need something to smile about," he says.

One benefit of clowning is that it is flexible. It can take as much or as little time as a person wants to spend with it, he says. He also enjoys the uniqueness of clowning.

"It's our way of serving God," he says.

While it may be an unusual pastime and an unconventional way to serve, Brimage seems to believe that the time and energy he puts into clowning is worth it.

This year's Student Publications photographic staff spent many sleepless nights coping with photo deadlines from both this yearbook and from The Pine Log; sometimes the deadlines occurred on the same day. The photographers covered a record number of events and occasions on and off campus from rush week to concerts to football games in Abilene. 1) Marc Morrison. 2) The 1983-84 Student Publications Photographic Staff. 3) Hal Lott. 4) Bob Leonard. 5) Jim Stotts, chief photographer. 6) Bobby Chapman.
